P R E F A C E

For many years I have been collecting material relating to the Molyneux Family.

Omissions there are many, for it has been difficult to get response to letters; but many thanks are due to the kindly help and encouragement of Major General Edward L. Molyneux of Greater New York; Rear Admiral Sir Robert Molyneux, K.C.B.; Hon. William More Molyneux, Guildford, Sussex, England; Captain Joseph B. Molyneux of Cleveland, Ohio, U. S. A.; and Mr. Charles E. Molyneux, President of the Molyneux Historical Society, Dushore, Pa.

Old letters, correspondence with descendants of both English and Irish branches, with in many cases Bible records. In some cases these have been hard to decipher, and the spelling, especially of proper names and armorial bearings, has varied greatly. It has been thought best to follow the copy, even where it seemed erroneous, which will account for many seeming inconsistencies.

LINEAGE OF THE ENGLISH BRANCH, MOLYNEUX

In 1066, among the noble attendants of the Conqueror was William de Molins, a person of noble extraction, as appears from the roll of Battle Abbey in which list his name stands 18th, in order; and to the said William, Roger de Poitiers (by consent of the Conqueror) gave the manor of Sefton, Thorndon and Kerndon, in the County of Lancaster of which Sefton became his chief seat. To him succeeded Vivian, his heir, who bore a cross Moline for his arms, and was father to Adam de Molines; who married Annota dau. of Benedict Garnet, Lord of Speke in Lancastershire, and had three sons of which Robert s. and m. TRADITION OF THE FAMILY:—

1. Robert Molyneux,* was the son of a Spanish Priest of noble family and a French Nun, who left the Cloister, going to Moulin, where he (Robert) was born, his mother giving him the name of Robert de Moulin, after the place where he was born. She then returned to the Cloister, where by her penance and piety she became the Abbess of the Cloister. She is spoken of by many as Heloise, with whom Peter Abelard fell in love to the scandal of the church, and after the birth of the son Robert they were privately married. The union did not appease the wrath of the canon, and Abelard was expelled from the priesthood and became one of the founders of the Oblates, a society

*Aberlard and Heloise as the parents of Robert de Moulin (Molyneux) are not to be vouched for,—but the story as tradition was told to me in the above paragraph. But there is to be found, among the Bishops of Hereford, the name of Robert de Meulin, Priory of Llanthony, who was so consecrated 22 Dec., 1163, Ob. 27, Feb., 1166-7, therefore it would not be surprising if the Robert de Meulin here named were not the son mentioned and the ancestor of the House of Molyneux.

still existing in the Caucasian Mountains. (Tradition also tells us that from this order of Priests often comes the call to the House of Molyneux, and when this call comes, the one called leaves all to obey.) Robert Molyneux, born in Mouline, known as "The Comte de Meulin," married

- 2—I. Captain William Molyneux (Molins) appears to have been one of the most distinguished, as well from the Battle Abbey roll, wherein his name stands 18th in order as from the old Chronicles of the duchy, wherein he is set down and placed as a most especial and chief man in nearness and singular credit with his royal master. Captain William Molyneux and his brother Vivian were in the 1st expedition of the Army sent by William the Conqueror under the conduct of Roger de Poytiers, and the said Roger de Poytiers* who was then possessed of all the tract of land in Lanc. between the river Ribbie and Mersy by gift of the crown, gave among other lands and manors of Septon, Thorndon, Kerdon, and half of land as services

* William Roger de Poytieres (so called because his wife was a Poitaime, or native of the province of Poitiers). Of Roger de Poytiers Camden says, "The name is not to be met with in writings; but only that of Roger de Poitiers (also given as Picketaviensis), who was lord of the honour of Lancaster, built a Castle there, the government whereof was enjoyed for a long time by the noble family of Molyneux,—knights (and now Lords Molyneux) whose chief seat is hard by, at Sephton which the said Roger de Poitiers bestowed upon Vivian de Molyneux, a little after the coming of the Normans, for all the land between the Ribbie and Mersey, belonged to the said Roger, as appears by Doomsday."

PEDIGREE FROM THE PLEA ROLLS

De Banco. 464.

Lanc., Mich. 4 I—e—t.

Robert, son of Simon Molyneux of Thornton, sued Agnes, formerly wife of Robert Alcockson of Thornton, for lands in Thornton which Richard, son of Robert Molyneux, had given Robert to the heirs of his body.

The pleadings gave this pedigree:—

Robert de Molyneux. Living temp. E. W. I.
Robert.

I. Simon.

I. Robert the plaintiff:—

Robert Molyneux stated to have held Sefton and other lands in County Lancaster, but the Molyneux pedigree takes no notice of him.

- 6—26. John Molyneux, son of Vincent Molyneux and Isabell Dugale, a soldier (son of Vincent Molyneux who was returned to Parliament as Knight of the Shire 1301), who descended from Robert de Molyneux of Molens in Bourbonnais, who came to England with Henry I.—Sir John Molyneux of Crosby who bore the cross mouline crowned, married 1st Agnes Blundell dau. of David Blundell, Esq.; of Crosby Hall; m. 2d Isabella dau. of Robert Erney of Chester; m. 3d Egida dau. of Henry Charnock (d. 1362). Sir John was in the service of the Chancellor, in 1325–29. Was sent abroad on some mission with William de Montauch (first Earl of Salisbury, in whose service he was). Molyneux received numerous grants from Edward III., chiefly of manors and Seignorial rights, in 1385. He received pardon for entertaining John Mautravers, lately banished, Thomas de Berkley and others. In the same year he is spoken of as “Valletus” to the King, and received lands and Manors of Dalchet and Pullner, Buckinghamshire, under Mountacule in Scottish wars, for which in 1338 he received £220 10 s. 1 d. as wages and compensation for the horses he had lost; in 1338 he received the custody of the King’s hawks and other birds; was created a Knight Baronet, and employed in negotiating alliance with the Duke of Brabant. In 1340 was one that undertook to raise wools for the King's aid but the supplies which reached Edward were quite insufficient. The King was compelled to raise the seige of Tourney. He returned suddenly to London on the 30th of Nov., arrested Molyneux and imprisoned him in the Tower, but he escaped and apparently refused to appear before the King's Justices. For this rebellion his lands were forfeited. In 1345 he was pardoned and his lands were gradually restored to him with additional grants. On the 18th Sept., 1346 he was directed with all the men-at-arms and archers he could muster to the defence of Sandwich. In 1347 he was summoned as Baron to attend a Council of Parliament. (But this summons did not entitle him to a hereditary rite, and neither his son nor his grandson received it.) In 1352 he became Steward to Queen Philippa and overseer of her castle. In 1362 he was accused of falsely indicating Robert Lombard for breaking into the Queen's park, and his death took place this year in Cambridge castle, and he was buried in Stoke Poges church, where a monument without any subscription near the altar, is said to be his. He was a benefactor to religious foundations. His wife Egidia died in 1367.

45. Alice Molyneux; m. Robert Molyneux.
- 8—41. Nicholas Molyneux (De Moels), 2nd son of Roger Molyneux, seneschal of Gascony, in royal service 1215-17. In 1224 sent as royal messenger to Cologne, in connection with the mission of Walter Mauclerk. In August 1228, was despatched as messenger to the King's brother Earl Richard, in Poitou. From 1228-32, he was sheriff of Hampshire and Custos of Winchester Castle. In May, 1230, he was with the King in Brittany and sent by him on a mission to Hugh, count of Marche, and his wife, Queen Isabella, the King's mother. 1241 was guardian of the bishopric of Durham during a vacancy. In 1254, when warden of Oxford Castle, gave to Henry de Hannah, the provincial of the Carmelites, a house in Oxford, which was the first establishment of that order in the University. Matthew Paris calls him "miles strenuissimus et circumspectus". In 1261 in charge of Sherbourne Castle and in 1263 of Corfe Castle. He married Hawse, dau. of James Newmarch, in whose right he held Cadbury in Somerset, in Gloucestershire. He was a person so highly regarded by the King that James, son and heir, was by special command admitted to have his education with Prince Edward, the Prince's tutors, Hugh de Gaffard and Bernard de Savory, having directions to receive him, with one servant, and provide him with all necessaries.

While in the capacity of seneschal of Gascony, he was employed at the seige of Gramont, near Bidache. Trouble was already impending with Thibaut, king of Navarre, who in the following year threatened Bayonne. Eventually, in the autumn of 1244, he defeated the king (Matt. Paris, IV. 396). The only other known incident of his senschalship is a conflict with Amigot de Garro, a Gascon robber-lord, who had captured certain messengers which had been sent to Thibaut.

of Gloucester, who died a few days after. Sir Adam Molyneux was accused by sailors at Portsmouth "about the Epiphany of our Lord" of docking wages. He is said to have spoken haughtily. The sailors cried that he was a traitor and had sold Normandy to the French, fell upon him, and ill-used him so severely that he died on the 9th of Jan., 1450. When attacked he is reported to have said something that was held to reflect seriously on Suffolk, who when on trial laid the blame of the actual delivery of Le Mans on the murdered bishop. Some declared that Moleyns (Molyneux) owed his death to his covetousness. Adam Molyneux was Bishop of Chichester. He bequeathed some handsome church ornaments to his cathedral (Stephens). He was a capable politician. The charge that he in any way betrayed the interest of England is untrue. He was a man of learning and culture; a friend of Vincent Clement, and corresponded and was esteemed by Ætneus Sylvius. An epitaph for him commemorates his prudence in affairs and his desire for peace.

"This family traced its descent from William de Molines of the Norman invaders, whose name is derived from a town in the Bourbonnais and stands eighteenth on the Battle Abbey Roll. William de Molines obtained from Roger of Poitiers the grant of Sefton, where the family have since been seated, its present representative being Osbert Cecil, sixth earl of Sefton.

“Adam Molines (Moleyns, Molyneux) was appointed keeper of the privy seal 11 Feb., 1444, in succession to Thomas Becketon, Bishop of Bath and Wells, and on the same day was commissioned with Suffolk and Sir Robert Roos, as ambassador to conclude a peace or truce with France (Faeder, XI. 53, 58, 60). In May the ambassadors succeeded in arranging a truce, and obtained the betrothal of Margret of Anjou to King Henry VI. Adam Moleyns (Molyneux) also received a patent from the King for the exportation of wool, for which Henry bought back from him for 1,000*l.* (Ramsay, Lancaster and Rork, ii.79), and also had license to ‘impark’ twelve thousand acres, and to fortify twelve manor-houses (Stephens). On 9 Dec. he resigned the privy seal, and received the King’s permission to travel on either side of the channel (Faedera, XI. 225).”.....

- 17—109. Sir William Molyneux, a great commander in the Co. Lancaster; b. 1433, d. 1548. William Molyneux led a considerable force to serve in 1513, under his cousin Sir Richard Stanley at Flodden Field, where he took with his own hand two Scottish banners and the Earl of Huntley's arms. For this service he was personally thanked in a letter by Henry VIII. Sir William brought a considerable strength to the seasonable succor of the Duke of Norfolk, with whom he performed signal service at the battle of Flodden Field. He married Jane, dau. to Sir Richard Rugg (sometimes Rugg,—Riggs) of Rugg, in Co. Stafford; m. 2d, Elizabeth, dau. of Cuthbert Clifton, in Lanc.; widow of Sir Richard Heskeith, Knight of Ruf-ford, in Co. Lanc., and became in consequence Lord of Clifton. Sir William was a gallant Knight in the reign of Henry III, and displayed great bravery. On his death-bed he gave this advice to his son, " Let the underwood grow ; the tenants are the support of the family, and the commonality are the strength of a kingdom. Improve this fairly ; but force not violently either your bounds or your rents above your fathers. He died 1548 and was buried at Sefton Church, where there is a monument and a eulogistic Latin inscription to his memory. Knighted at Flodden Field in 1513 and given a tiger passant proper on a crown or, for his crest.

Letter to Sir William Molyneux, Junior Knight, from King Henry VIII :

" Trusty and well-beloved, we greet you well, and understand, as well by the report of our trusty cousin and counsellor, the Duke of Norfolk, as otherwise, what acceptable service you, amongst others, lately did unto us, by your valiant towardnesse in the assisting of our said cousin, against our common enemy, the late King of Scots, and how courageously you, as a very hearty loving servant, acquitted yourself for the overthrow of the said late King, and distressing of his malice and power, to our great honour, and the advancing of your no little fame and praise ; for which we have good cause to favor and thank you, and so we full heartily do ; and assured you may be that we shall in such effectual wise remember your said service in any your reasonable pursuits, as you shall have cause to think the same right well employed to your comfort and weal hereafter. Given under our Signet, at our castle at Windsor, the 27th of November.”

NOTE.—Mathew Molyneux, younger son of Darcy Molyneux and Elizabeth Basset, was a clergyman, born in 1791; and married 1st, when eighteen years of age Ann Stuart of Whitby; m. 2d, Mary Staniforth; and 3d Mary Haverlock.

Issue by 1st wife:

20—786. William Molyneux; died young.

787. John Molineux; died aged 82.

788. Ann (dead).

789. Joseph (dead).

Issue by 2d wife:

790. Martha Ann; married young and died.

791. Staniforth Molineux; drowned at sea (in the Bay of Fundy). He was in the navy.

792. George Molineux; b. in Hull, England, May 12, 1823.

793. Mary Molineux; b. 1826; married ——— Thompson (she died in Leeds, England, May 5, 1900).

20—792. George Molineux, son of George Molineux and Mary Staniforth; born in Hull, England, May 12, 1823; came to America in or about 1840; married Agnes Girvan May 2, 1849. She was born in New York, September 17, 1825.

Issue:

- 21—794. George Molineux; b. March 9, 1850.
 795. Agnes; b. Aug. 11, 1853; married Henry Teall.
 796. Mary Staniforth Molineux; b. 1856; d. 1857.
 797. Staniforth Molineux; b. Aug. 9, 1858, d. Jan. 17, 1895.

George Molineux Teall; b. Feb. 20, 1887; d. April, 1887.

Anna Peck Teall; b. Nov. 28, 1888; d. Dec. 24, 1891.

Hazel Georgia Teall; b. Oct. 10, 1891.

Boston, Mass. 21—799. LeVan Molineux, son of George Molineux and Agnes Girvan; b. April 17, 1862; married June 6, 1888, Mary Lizzie Edna Mallinson.

Issue:

22—801. Alice Louise Molineux; b. Oct. 27, 1889.

18—132. Francis Molyneux, a woolen draper in St. Paul's church-yard; m. Mary Tancred, dau. of Charles Tancred (sometimes Tanckred), of Whixley, in Yorkshire, Esq.; and had four daughters.

19—169. Mary Molyneux.

170. Dorothy Molyneux; m. Viscount Falkland (Lucius Henry 5th, Viscount Falkland son of Anthony 4th Viscount in 1694). The aristocratic descent of the London woolen draper is clear and undoubted. He was the younger son of Francis Molyneux of Mansfield Notts (17—132) by Grace, 6th dau. of Conyers, Lord Darcy. These were days when the junior members of the aristocracy did not entirely disdain the honorable pursuit of merchandise.....Macaulay in his History of England tells us that "The knight of the shire was the connecting link between the baron and the shopkeeper. On the same benches on which sat the goldsmiths, drapers, and grocers, who had been returned from parliament by the commercial towns, sat also members who, in any other country, would have been called noblemen, hereditary lords of manors, entitled to hold courts and bear coats of armor, and able to trace back an honorable descent through many generations. Some of them were younger sons and brothers of lords. Others could boast of even royal blood.”

Elizabeth; m. Hugh Bunny of Newland, in Yorkshire, Esq.

194. Henry; b. at Lyduate Ormskirk Lancashire; was in 1684 imprisoned in Lancaster Castle for attending Quaker's meetings.

While in gaol he met Mary Southworth of Warrington, who was imprisoned on the same ground. He married her at Penketh, in Feb., 1685, she being then 32 years old.

Molineux was sent to Lancaster Castle again in Dec., 1690, on this occasion for non-payment of tithes, and after being detained several months was liberated through his wife's personal appeal to Bishop Stratford. He died at Lydgate Nov. 16, 1719. He wrote several books in defence of Quaker principles; 1. "Antichrist Unveiled by the Finger of God's Power," 1695, 8vo. 2. "An Invitation from the Spirit of Christ to all that are athirst to come and drink of the Waters of Life." 3. "Popery exposed by its own Authors, and two Romish Champions checked...being an Answer...to James Wetmough and Matthew Hall," 1718. His wife died in Liverpool Nov. 3, 1695, aged 44, leaving children. She was a facile writer of pious verse, a collection of which was published in 1702, under the title of "Fruits of Retirement, or Miscellaneous Poems, Moral and Divine, etc." It passed through six editions, the last of which was printed in 1772.

NOTE.—Joachim could not have been a brother of Guillium (William) Molyneux as his son Pierre was born in 1568, a date given before the birth of the father; he must have been an uncle of Guillium (William) Molyneux, and brother to Robert Molyneux founder of the junior branch of the House of Molyneux.

18—149. Joachim du Mulin (Molyneux John Molyneux an eminent pastor at Orleans), m. Francois Gabet, widow of Jacques du Plessis.

Issue:

19—196. Pierre Molyneux, b. 1568 at Buhy Vixen Francais.

His mother's father had temporarily taken refuge here, and was acting as chaplain to Perre de Buhy, brother of the so-called Huguenot Pope, Phillippe de Mornay. When he was four years old his parents, compelled to flee to avoid the St. Bartholomew massacres, left their four children in charge of an old nurse, a Catholic, at Coevres, near Soissons. Pierre was concealed under a mattress. On the murderers' approach his cries would have attracted their attention had not the nurse rattled her pots and pans, pretending to be cleaning them, and had not his sister aged seven put her hand over his mouth.

Pierre was educated at Sedan. In 1533 his father, harassed by persecutions, dismissed him with twelve crowns, bidding him seek his fortune in England, where he was befriended by Menillet, who afterwards married his sister. The Countess of Rulland sent him as tutor to her son at Cambridge, where he continued his own studies under Whitaker. September, 1592 he embarked for Holland on a visit to Professor Jumes of Leyden, but was shipwrecked off Walcheren, loosing all his books and other possessions, a disaster which inspired his Latin poem "Votiva Tabella". Grotius was one of his pupils.

In 1598 he went to see his father at Jargeau, and was induced to enter the ministry March, 1599, was appointed to Charenton, the suburb where Paris Protestants worshipped. He accompanied, as chaplain Catherine de Bourbon, Henry IV's sister, on her periodical visits to her husband, the Duke of Bourborn, at his palace in Lorraine, preaching before her during the journey in Meaux Cathedral and other Catholic churches. While standing by her death-bed in 1604 Cardinal du Perron, sent by Henry IV to convert her to Catholicism, tried to push him from the room, but he clung to the bedpost. Du Mulins's (Moly-eux) house in Paris was the resort of the French and foreign Protestants, Andrew Melville staying there in 1611. In 1622 he married 2d, Sarah de Giesley, and settled in England in 1635 near London Bridge.

Allen Molines (often spelt Mullins and Molyneux) M. D. ; educated in Dublin University; graduated B. A. and M. B. in 1676, and M. D. in 1684. Elected fellow of the College of Physicians in Ireland 1685. Attempted original research in anatomy, and became a prominent member of the Dublin Philosophical society, to which he contributed valuable papers on human and comparative anatomy. The most important was that in which he described the vascularity of the lens of the eye to the dissection of an elephant. A discreditable love affair obliged him to remove to London in 1686, and thence he went with William O'Brien, 2d Earl Inchenquin, in 1690 to the West Indies. He died soon after landing at Barbadoes from the effect of intoxication (1690).

218. Priscilla; m. John Alden (b. in England, 1599) of Plymouth, for 50 years magistrate.

Priscilla Molins was a sweet-faced girl, young and fair. Captain Miles Standish, also a descendant of the Molyneux family, his mother being Bridget Molyneux, his father grandson of Annie Molyneux, a dau. of Sir Richard Molyneux, made knight under the Black Prince, would make her Mrs. Standish, for he had laid his beautiful wife Rose to sleep on Burial Hill. Why should he live alone? He thought it better to get bashful John Alden, about her own age, to open the question. But to-day comes back her girlish utterance "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?" Priscilla married John Alden in 1628, and had eleven children.

She died at the residence of her only son August 15, 1865, age 96; is buried in Greenwood cemetery. Her father was the younger son of a family of good standing. His elder brother inheriting the paternal soil by English law, he came to America in 1710 attached to the staff of Gov. Hunter, and when the latter returned to England or went to Jamacia, he remained and settled in Ulster Co. The family by repute was originally Norman French, and the name Molineux was then pronounced Mulliner.

Of the other nine I find no record. A daughter of the same Robert Molyneux or a niece, by some her father thought to have been a clergyman, Mrs. Major Crotty, died in the south, thought to be in Virginia, under distressing circumstances about 1805. Tradition says she became infatuated with the ship's captain, a Scotchman, and after visiting her relatives in and near Boston, Mass., left with the captain, saying that she was to sail home at her husband's bidding. She was young and fair. After taking her departure, her husband, Major Crotty, came for her, and followed her south, only to find that she had been deserted, and left to die alone, the means of her identification being a locket with her husband's picture.

JESSE MOLYNEUX (MOLLINEAUX) (20—806)

It is due to the character of the late Jesse Mollineaux and his surviving friends and relatives to give a brief account of his life and the distinguishing qualities of his mind exhibited through a large course of industry and usefulness.

* NOTE.—Found among the Marriage Records of the Society of Friends in the town of Harrison, N. Y.

He was a native of Westchester county, N. Y., where he was born in 1776. His progenitor was among the exiles from France on the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1684, during the reign of Louis XIV, who with other Huguenot exiles reached America and settled as circumstances dictated.

The town of New Rochelle and neighboring towns on Long Island were settled by them, among whom were the ancestor of Jesse Mollineaux. We find him at 17 an apprentice to the tanning business at Jericho with the late Elias Hicks and son-in-law Royal Aldrich, having faithfully performed engagements with them. He came to Hempstead and was employed by persons in the same business. He proved himself equally faithful and diligent. Indeed it seems to have been early adopted by him as a principle which governed his subsequent conduct, to do equal and exact justice to all with whom he had any concern. His reputation for honesty, fidelity, and truth was proverbial in the community where he lived, and no man enjoyed to a greater degree than he the confidence and good opinion of those who knew him best. From early life he evinced an extraordinary genius for invention, and his propensity for mechanical art was a predominant trait in his character. Although he had little advantage from books or instruction yet he appeared to have such knowledge of the principles of varied kinds of machinery as surprised those who witnessed his performances and at the same time were capable of appreciating the importance of his discoveries in practical mechanics. His observation was acute, his mode of reasoning correct, and his power of combining mechanical forces such as is rarely met with.

One of the most valuable contrivances was an improvement on shearing cloth, an invention not only well received by the public but generally adopted. In England it met with fatal opposition from the employes in the woolen manufactories, as had been the case with many other valuable improvements.

His next most valuable improvement or discovery was that of a mill for grinding grain, sawing timber and other purposes, to be propelled by the wind, in which wings moving horizontally should be so subdivided into sections as not only to economize power but at the same time be less liable to injury from gales and tempests. This invention has been a good many years in successful operation. But as the genius of the inventor never rests satisfied, Mr. Mollineaux determined to improve upon the manner in which the motive power was applied to the parts exposed to the wind, and also increase the subdivision of the surface exposed to the current of air as not only to economize power, allowing the machinery to be operated by lighter wind thereby, adding to the proportion of time which the mill could be employed and at the same time lessening the damage to be apprehended from the more violent commotions of the atmosphere. A mill of this description executed with great neatness, was erected for his own use some years ago on the open plains between the villages of Hempstead and Jericho near Westbury. In the dwelling connected therewith the inventor made his future residence.

While on a visit to his son sick of typhus fever of which he died, his father caught the disease, which terminated his life March 9th, 1842, in his 66th year. Having thus lived a moral life and in the conscientious discharge of all his obligations he departed with the utmost composure, bidding those around his dying bed bear him witness that he had no apprehension of suffering beyond the grave, saying that his confidence in the beneficence of the Creator would not permit him to believe that any of his dependent creatures would be otherwise than happy in a future state of existence.

ROBERT MOLINEUX,
Died Nov. 10, 1806,
Age 45.
Here reign silence and peace

Here too lies small particles of human nature in ruins, having performed the journey of life in 45 years he is now incorporated with the elements.
 Thus contented lived and contented died.

MRS. MARGART McHARD, wife of
 ROBERT 'MOLINEUX,
 Died Sept. 17, A.D., 1814,
 Age 44 years.

Go home children, do not mourn,
 I shall lie here till Christ shall come
 And at his coming, hope to have
 A joyful rising from the grave.

Boston Capt. William McHard (father of Margaret Mc-Hard, wife of Robert Molineux). We have heard our father speak of him as "a fine old Irish gentleman";
 d. 1807, age 85. "An old school shipmaster. He lived at the head of Market St. in the Morse House—known as the witch house." Inscription on his son's tomb:

Memento Mort.

Here is interred the body of
 MR. JOSEPH MCHARD, who departed this life Dec. 17, 1779,
 In the 24th year of his age.
 This youthful bloom was took away
 To ye cold grave, there to stay
 Till Jesus comes to summon all
 That ever died since Adams fall.

Omnem Crede Diem Tiber Deluresse Supremum,
 Sacred to the Memory of Mrs. Mary McHard, the amiable consort of Captain Wm. McHard of Newburyport, who amidst the laudable exertions of every useful and desirable life in which her Christian Profession was adorned and a fair copy of every social Virtue displayed, was in a state of embraces of her friends, and the throbbing hearts of her disconsolate family confessed their fairest prospects of Sublunary bliss were in one moment dashed by swallowing a Pea at her Own table whence in a few hours she sweetly breathed her Soul away in her Saviours arms on the 8th day of March, A. D., 1780, age 47.

This mournful Stone, as a faithful Monument of Virtue fled to realms above & a solemn monitor to all below the stars is erected by her Husband.

“Not so very quietly either did she breath out her soul, for she died in the greatest distress, when all means that occurred to the family had been resorted to. They stood her on her head, put snuff and pepper in her nose to cause her to sneeze, and made Various efforts; but no surgeon, it appears, thought to apply his knife and open her throat."

- 20—223. Jane Molyneux, born Prince Edward Island, Dec. 22, 1766, died at Chelsea, Mass., April 30, 1848. She came to Boston in 1785 with her brother Robert Molyneux. THE JANE MOLYNEUX ROOM

Rev. Smith Baker, one of the members of the executive committee of the French Protestant colleges, suggested the idea that an invitation be given to individuals, Sabbath schools, and societies to subscribe $100.00 towards the erection of Owen St. Hall for the use of the college, and thus have the privilege of naming one room in the projected building. Several rooms have already been named. Rev. C. F. Amaron, after an address at the Winchester Congregational church received from Mrs. Moss Herrick the offer of $100.00 for this purpose. Mrs. Herrick in sending the check, gives us the following interesting facts, which we take pleasure in publishing.

In 1685 the celebrated revocation of the Edict of Nantes occurred, which caused the exile of 500,000 Huguenots. They took refuge in foreign countries. The leading Huguenots were invited to Paris on the eve of St. Bartholomews' day, when a great massacre ensued. The Molinier or Molyneux family with⁶ others escaped, and reached the North of Ireland, occupied by Protestants. Robert Molyneux afterwards settled in Prince Edward's Island, where his daughter, Jane Molyneux (Mrs. Herrick's honored mother), was born Dec. 22d, 1766. Her father afterwards removed to Londonderry, N. H. It is said there were fifteen children in the family. After the death of her father and mother Jane lived with her brother in Boston, Mass. In 1735 she was converted and joined the 2d Baptist church in Boston. In 1791 she married Mr. John Ripley of Boston, who was a worthy descendant of the Puritans. He died July 16, 1843, aged 79 years, 7 months. Mrs. Ripley died April 30, 1848, aged 79 years, 4 months. Mrs. Jane Ripley was a noble scion of the Huguenots. She inherited the vivacity and intelligence of her French ancestors, united with deep religious fervor and the sterling integrity which made the Huguenots so respected. The husband truly said of her to his children, "Your mother is a wonderful woman." She was the mother of ten children. John, the eldest, died in his youth. Three children died in infancy.

Rev. Henry J. Ripley was professor at the Newton Theological Seminary for many years, and author of many valuable religious works. Rev. Thomas Ripley, Maria C. Ripley, Caroline A. Ripley, Amelia J. Ripley, and Rachel H. Ripley. Amelia J. Ripley married Mr. Chas. Hubbard of Boston, passing nearly fifty years together of loving companionship. (They were Mrs. Herrick's beloved parents.) On her the many Christian graces of her Huguenot ancestors have fallen, being deeply and sincerely devout, intelligent kind and affectionate, and giving freely to all good causes.

(II) Amelia Jane Ripley, born in Boston, Mass., July 29, 1806. Baptized into the Baptist church of Boston by Rev. Mr. Stow, in 1833; died at Winchester, Mass., Jan. 21, 1888. Married, Boston, Mass., Jan. 19, 1826, by Rev. James D. Knowles, to Hon. Charles Hubbard, born at Brighton, Mass., March 18, 1801; died at Chelsea, Mass., Dec. 27, 1875, son of William and Elizabeth (Copen) Hubbard (or Hobard). Charles Hubbard was an artist by profession (Gerry and Champney being at one time among his apprentices) and earned a modest fortune by his painting. He was for many years a director in the Winnesinimet Ferry Co., and for thirty years a director on the New England Life Insurance Co. of Boston and at his death was chairman of the finance committee. Mr. Hubbard when a boy helped work on the Boston fortifications, in the war of 1812. On Aug. 26, 1822 he was commissioned ensign in the 2d Regiment, 3d Brigade, Militia of Massachusetts, was promoted June 16, 1826, to be lieutenant, and on May 5, 1829, was made captain, resigning March 19, 1831. He removed to Chelsea in 1835, serving the city as selectman and chairman of school committee. In 1851 and again in 1852 he represented his district (of Suffolk) in the senate of the General Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Charles and Amelia Jane (Ripley) Hubbard had the following children:

Irish Branch 22—292. Sir Thomas Molyneux, who was born at Calais in 1531, was an only child; his parents died while he was very young, and he was brought up by John Brishin, as Alderman of Calais.

When the town was taken from the English by the Duke of Guise in 1558, Molyneux was made prisoner and ransomed himself for 500 crowns. He moved to Burges, and married the daughter of an opulent burgomaster.

On account of Alva's persecutions he moved to London, England, in 1586, and was sent to Dublin, Ireland, in 1576, by Queen Elizabeth as Chancellor of the Exchequer, where he obtained with extensive grants of land from her majesty a lease for twenty years of the exports and imports of the city of Dublin (wines excepted) for the annual rental of £183. He died in Dublin January 24, 1599, and was buried in the Cathedral of Christ church. In consequence of an impurgement of the legality of Molyneux's official employment under the Queen on an allegation that he was an alien, an inquiry was instituted in the court of the exchequer, at Dublin, 1594. Witnesses before the attorney-general deposed that Molyneux was an Englishman born at Calais, while the town was under the Crown of England.

“ There is a pathetic page in the life of William Molyneux. Soon after the birth of his last son, Thomas, early in the year 1792, he being then about 31 years of age living with his wife and children near the city of Manchester, he went to the city to purchase material for his business, that of a weaver. After he had started home he was seized by what is known as the press gang and forcibly carried on board a man-of-war then in the harbor. The ship crossed the Atlantic and cruised in American waters. Smarting under the cruel injustice which had been done him (for he was not allowed to see or bid his family farewell) he sought a chance to escape. One night, the ship at anchor in Chesapeake Bay, he sprang overboard and swam ashore. He made good his escape, and reached the English settlement of Northumberland. Here he obtained employment with a surveying party. While on the trip he was pleased with the bottom land just below the forks of the Little Loyalsock, which he afterwards purchased. He erected a log house and went back to England for his family, shipping as a sailor from Philadelphia. On landing in Liverpool the authorities attempted to arrest him, but with good luck and shrewdness he eluded them and went on to Manchester.

Here he learned that his wife and infant daughter, born after his seizure had died. Taking his sons John and Thomas, and his daughter Elizabeth (his son Edward having gone to live on a farm), he put them on board ship and again shipped as a sailor. The authorities again received information of him, and the officers even came on board to arrest him. It is said that Molyneux feigned lunacy. He thought it useless to hide or escape, so crammed his mouth full of bread and went among the officers who were looking for him laughing and jabbering and acting his part so well that they failed to recognize him and went ashore.

“ His was the first log house built in Northumberland, Sullivan Co., Pennsylvania. Once in his old age he visited his native country (England), hunted up the merchant, and paid him for the bill of goods he purchased on the day of his seizure by the press gang.....

“ The Molyneux's are frugal and industrious, strictly temperate, and of strong religious and political convictions.

They are usually of small stature, light complexion, flaxen hair, blue eyes, and capable of great endurance. The children are mostly tow heads, but the hair becomes quite dark as they grow older

MARY ANN KIMBALL MOLINEUX

Saturday morning passed away a lady who, although she has not always lived among us, nevertheless had during her residence here gained many loving friends. Mrs. Molineux had lived nearly 87 years of a well-rounded and noble life. Her hands were always open to the poor and needy and many a "forlorn and shipwrecked brother" was heartened and cared for both by her and her husband, Mr. James McHard Kast Molineux, who died several years ago. Mrs. Molineux was esteemed not only for her practical goodness but for her great and intellectual integrity. She was a great reader and for over sixty years was a subscriber of the Boston Transcript, and from its inception of Littlell's Living Age.

She did much to direct the reading of her grand-daughter who has so much literary reputation. Both she and her husband were free soilers, and among the earliest supporters of Theodore Parker when his friends were few.

Among her many gifts, perhaps the greatest were those of a retiring modesty and a noble self-abnegation.

The children of James McHard Kast Molineux and Mary Ann Kimball Molineux were:

22—303. Henry Molineux; b. June 8th, 1831, at Merideth Bridge (now Laconia, N. H.) m. in 1879 Mrs. Kate A. Flint Noyes of Brooklyn, and died March 20, 1900.

HENRY MOLINEUX

Son of James McHard Kast Molineux and Mary Ann Kimball. Taken about 1874 (22—303).

Henry Molineux was laid in Mount Hope on March 21st, passing away after confinement to his bed for nearly a year and a half.....As a very young man he left his home in Boston for San Francisco, early in the fifties, and in the State of California he lived until on account of his health in 1895 he retired from active business and returned to his mother, since deceased, in West Roxbury. He held many positions of honor and trust in his adopted city and State.

When Leland Stanford was governor in 1861 Mr. Molineux was a clerk and recorder of Sierra Co., where he was largely interested in mines and later served for more than a term as county treasurer. Not being acceptable to the government as soldier during the Civil War, he paid a substitute. In San Francisco, when there was a short-lived attempt at reform government in 1881, he was elected as supervisor of the fifth ward and as chairman of the finance committee, took rank directly after the Mayor, presiding in his absence. It was interesting to know that, one corporation considered his vote worth $40,000, which sum it is needless to say was offered in vain and not mentioned by him. The offering coming to the ears of his friends by other sources, after holding various desirable and responsible offices in the Mercantile Library Association, he was chosen president in 1882 and made an honorary member in 1883. About this time he held the position for a short time of president of four San Francisco banks, and was for many years an importer by shiploads of sulphur from Japan. For 30 years he was head of the Pacific coast department of the Seth Thomas Clock Company of Thomaston, Ct., as agent, stockholder and employer, he was esteemed and beloved by all from the highest members of the corporation, of which his friend Seth Edward Thomas is treasurer, down to the humblest porter in the great wholesale store. Few have been able to win so much devoted affection. He never used alcohol nor tobacco. In 1869 Mr. Molineux joined the Odd Fellows, and he early identified himself with the Masons, becoming a life member of the Marysville Council, No. 3 R. and S. M. in 1865; a Knight Templar in 1867; Royal Arch Mason in 1868; and was a member of Oriental Lodge in San Francisco as a master Mason until 1876. In 1878 he made an extensive tour in Europe in company with Mr. Thomas, visiting Italy and travelling over a thousand miles in Russia. In 1879 he married Mrs. Kate A. Flint Noyes of Brooklyn, who survives him.

23—330. James Molyneux; b. 1628.

331. Edward Molyneux (sometimes spelled Moline and Molineux), was appointed surgeon to St. Thomas's hospital in his father's lifetime, and surgeon for cutting the stone to St. Bartholomew's.

He was a man of violent temper, as on one occasion he defied the authority of the Barber Surgeons Company, to which he belonged, and was fined in consequence, never holding any office in the company. On the breaking out of the war between Charles I and parliament he joined the royal army, and was taken in arms at Arundel Castle when it surrendered to parliamentary forces in 1643. In consequence the House of Commons ordered the governors of St. Thomas's hospital to dismiss Moline from his office, which was done Jan. 25, 1643-4. He was mentioned as having compounded for his estate, the matter being finally settled in 1653. He was replaced in his hospital office after the Restoration, July 20, 1660, in compliance with a letter from Charles II; d. 1663; m.

Rebecca Bird.

She was the first white person born in what is now Sullivan Co., Pa. She was distinguished during her whole life of more than 85 years as a woman of many virtues. Edward Molyneux did not come to this country (America) until he had attained his majority, and was considered quite a dude by the other boys for the reason that he wore "store clothes" on Sunday. The story is told "that on Sunday, soon after Edward came to this country, a number of boys were lounging around the mill dam and that Edward was dressed in his knee breeches, silver buckled shoes, biled shirt, etc.; that his brother Thomas induced him to walk out on a saw log that lay with one end against the bank, and then rolled the log and gave him a ducking, fine clothes and all."

"The Edward Molyneux branch of the family is subject to a peculiar disease, known in medical science as Haemophilea or hereditary hemorrhage. The patient is usually called a bleeder. This disease is inherited through the marriage into the Bird family from the Hannant family of Norfolk, England, where the bleeder is always a male and the son of a female of the bleeder family; when a bleeder has brothers it has never reappeared in their descendants.

"The bleeding results from cuts, bruises, and the pulling of teeth and other wounds, and is capillary oozing of the blood.

"The vessels not being seen after the wound is received, instead of healing a core of dark color composed of coagulated blood forms in the wound, which in about 9 days opens and the blood begins to flow as if from a freshly severed artery. It usually continues to bleed about two weeks, until the patient is exhausted when the core falls out and the wound heals. Binding up does no good, and death is apt to result from binding too tight. Various remedies are used.

“The following receipt is vouched for as producing excellent results: 1 pint alcohol, 2 oz. camphor gum, 2 oz. harts-horn, $\frac{1}{2}$ pint sweet oil, $\frac{1}{2}$ pint spirits of turpentine (all well shaken together). By keeping the wound wet with the liniment so as to keep it clean and prevent the forming of the core the wound is said to commence healing at once and danger is avoided.”

HYMN BY E. MULLINEAUX (22—314; p. 113)

IS HE SATISFIED

TUNE—I'm Satisfied with Jesus Every Day

Is my blessed Saviour satisfied with me ?

Is my daily life what He is pleased to see ?

Am I trying every day, to lead sinners in the way ?

Am I telling them of Jesus every day ?

Chorus—Is He satisfied, is He satisfied,

Is my blessed Jesus satisfied with me ?

Is He satisfied, Is he satisfied,

Is my blessed Saviour satisfied with me?

Do I redeem the time that He has given,

Knowing soon that I must meet Him up in Heaven ?

Am I telling far and wide every sinner to decide,

To accept salvation through the Crucified ?

Have I learnt to love my neighbor as myself ?

Am I sacrificing much in their behalf ?

Have I died to self and sin, so that Jesus lives within ?

Has my Saviour full control of everything ?

Do I trust Him every day and every hour ?

Do I realize my weakness and His power ?

How He wants to live in me, so that sinners they, can see How my blessed Saviour came to set them free ?

When I see the crooked path that I have walked,

When I see the idle words that I have talked,

Oh it's hard to realize, that through Jesus' sacrifice

Every sin's forgiven and He is satisfied.

Chorus—Yes, He's satisfied, yes, He's satisfied,

Yes, my blessed Saviour's satisfied with me,

Yes, He's satisfied, yes, He's satisfied,

Bless His name, I know He's satisfied with me.

in London, England, March 26, 1696; d. in Burnham May 18.

He was sent to Maryland as superior of the Jesuits in 1736 and was reappointed in 1748. The Pennsylvania authorities availed themselves of his influence with the Indians on the western frontier when savages under French influence threatened the exposed settlements. He was with the Indians at Lancaster just before the treaty that was made in June and July, 1744. As the purpose of his visit was kept secret by the Pennsylvania government, it was suspected in Maryland "that his business was no other than to dissuade the Indians from making peace." He returned to England in 1749.

CROXTETH HALL

Croxteth Hall (anciently called Crosstoffe) the present residence of the Earls of Sefton, is pleasantly situated in a park of about 840 acres, abounding in game,* about four miles from Liverpool. The principal or west front of the mansion was built in 1702 by William, fourth Viscount Molyneux, whose arms are over the entrance, supported by two lions, with the motto, "Vivere sat vincere." Above is a sculptured trophy of banners, with the family crest on the keystone. In front of the house is a fine terrace, ascended by a double flight of steps. The rooms in this front are spacious and lofty, with the walls panelled in wainscot, the ceilings of stucco enriched in high relief. The south side of the house is more ancient, and was probably erected by Sir Richard Molyneux in the time of Elizabeth. On the east, at the back of the present mansion, was most likely the ancient front, the buildings occupying three sides of a quadrangle, from whence is an entrance leading to a large staircase, the windows of which (9th Vis.) 25—465. Charles William Molyneux—IX Viscount, confirmed to the established church in 1768, b. Sept. 2, 1748 and was created First Earl of Sefton in the Peerage of Ireland, Nov. 30, 1717.¹ Married Isabella, second daughter of William, 2d Earl of Harrington; d. 1796.

LINEAGE OF THE IRISH BRANCH OF MOLYNEUX

This ancient and truly honourable family settled in Calais in the time of Edward III, when that town was taken by the English, where its members held very considerable employment while it continued under the crown of England.

When Calais was taken by the French, in the reign of Queen Mary, Thomas Molyneux, then head of the house of the family of Molyneux, retired to Flanders; and at Burges married Katherine Slobert, daughter of the governor of that city, and ancestor to the noble family of that name. He afterwards retired to England. In 1567, Queen Elizabeth sent him to Ireland as Chancellor of the Exchequer, which office he held till his death. He had many grants of land from the Queen and a lease of twenty years of the exports and imports of the city of Dublin (wines excepted) for which he paid £183 per annum, a sum now scarcely adequate to the lowest clerk. He subscribed forty pounds towards the foundation of Trinity college in 1591, a liberal donation considering the value of money in those days.

By his wife, whose portrait, with that of her father and mother, excellent old Flemish pieces, are still preserved in the family, he had two sons and two daughters: first Samuel; second Daniel, heir to his brother.

Thomas Molyneux died in 1596, his lady the year following. Samuel Molyneux his eldest son represented the town of Mallow; in 1613 was marshal of the Court of Castle-Chamber, and succeeded Sir Jeffrey Fenton as clerk of the Queens works in 1598.

Dying unm. he was s. by his brother Daniel Molyneux, Esq., appointed in 1587 Ulster King of arms, whose collection of Irish family history among the manuscript of Trinity College prove him to have been a very learned and accurate antiquarian and scholar. He was an intimate friend of the great Camden, as may be seen in his letters from the great primate Usher; that learned divine preached Mr. Molyneux's funeral sermon, and emphatically observed, that "for piety, virtues, and learning, he was a Daniel indeed." Sir James Ware likewise, in his History de Cræsulious Hibernea, styles him his great friend while living. He represented the town of Strabane in the parliament in 1613.

He married Jane, dau. of Sir William Usher of the privy council. Issue:

Thomas Molyneux, governor of Wicklow, killed by rebels near Wexford, valiantly defending a fort, in 1642.

William Molyneux of Lincoln's Inn, barrister at law died unm.

Colonel Adam Molyneux of Ballymulvey in Co. Longford, of which he was knight of the shire in 1660, a gallant officer of the horse, whose portrait in armour is still extant in the family, in which the scars of many wounds are visible in his face. His branch ended in a female, mother of the late Admiral Lord Molyneux Shouldham, who left no issue by his lady, widow of Mr. Hercourt, cousin of Earl Harcourt.

The dau. of Daniel Molyneux m. William Boyer, of Dublin, Esq.; of an ancient English family.

The King of arms d. in 1632, s. by his son Samuel Molyneux, Esq.; of Castle Dillon, near Armagh, to which estate he s. through the Dillon family, now extinct. He was chief engineer of Ireland, and a most ingenious writer on the subject of gunnery; he distinguished himself particularly in the battle of Roses, in 1642, fought by the Marquis of Ormond, where Carte, in his life of the Duke, mentions the judicious disposition of two guns by Mr. Molyneux in a defile, by which eighty men's horses were killed at the first fire. He had a large piece of ground walled in near Francis St. for making experiments with bombs and great guns, to this day called Molyneux Yard and Engine Alley. He married Anne, dau. and heiress of William Dowdale, Esq., of Moun-Towne, in Co. Meath, an ancient English Protestant family in those days, by whom he had five sons and four daughters.

Thomas Molyneux.

William Molyneux of Castle Dillon, heir to his father, was a man of great abilities and patriotism. In 1683 he founded a learned society in Dublin of which the great Sir William Petty was first president. He was author of the "Celebrated Case of Ireland". When travelling through Wales, at the time of the revolution he was mistaken for William Molyneux, eldest son of Viscount Molyneux, for whom a reward of £500 was offered by the government. He was brought before the commanding officer at Denbriagh. He asserted in his defence that he was of the Molyneux of Ireland. The officer asked if he knew Colonel Adam Molyneux mentioned before. He replied he was his uncle, and much disfigured by sabre wounds in the face, during the rebellion of 1642, on which he was ordered to be instantly liberated by the commander, who observed he had served long under his gallant uncle in the wars of Ireland. It is singular that this Catholic Jacobite family never resident in Ireland should number peers of that realm, while the whiggish Protestant line, always distinguished for the loyal support of the church and constitutional governments, have never risen above the rank of baronets; but the honorable principles of the family have induced them, more than once to decline the offer of peerage on conditions degrading to patriotism.

Sir Capel erected in 1760, perhaps at that time, the most costly park gates and offices of hewn stone in the three Kingdoms. He d. aged 80 in 1797.

Ireland 25—468. William Molyneux, Esq., called "The Ingenious Molyneux" was born at his father's house in New Row, Dublin, April 17, 1656.

The heir to an easy fortune, having no particular predilection for the law, he devoted himself chiefly to philosophy and mathematics. June 19, 1678 he married with his father's consent Lucy, youngest dau. of Sir William Domville, Attorney-General of Ireland.

Mrs. Moyneux was a lady of remarkable beauty and amiable disposition; but unfortunately three months after marriage she was attacked by an illness which not only deprived her of sight but until her death 13 years after (1691), caused her intolerable pain. Mr. Molyneux himself suffered hereditary affection of the kidneys which seriously interfered with his enjoyment of life, and caused his premature death Jan. 31, 1698. He returned with his wife to Chester where he resided in a little house outside the north gate for nearly two years.

After the battle of Boyne, Jan. 31, 1689, Mr. Molyneux paid a hurried visit to his old father, Samuel Molyneux, who persisted in remaining in Dublin. On his return through Wales he was taken by the Deuburgshire militia for William Molyneux, eldest son of Lord Molyneux, for whose apprehension £500 reward was offered, but having proved his identity he was allowed to proceed on his journey.

Mr. Molyneux was a friend of John Locke, and by his will, a clause in his own hand, bequeathed the sum of £5 to buy a ring in memory of the esteem he held him. Molyneux died of gall stone Oct. 2, 1698. Mrs. Molyneux died May 9, 1691. He was buried in the north aisle of St. Audocus church, Dublin. A portrait of Molyneux hangs in Examination Hall, Trinity college, beside that of Archbishop King. Molyneux was author of "A Celebrated Case of Ireland".

Issue:

26—528. Samuel Molyneux, astronomer and politician, Lord of the Admiralty; b. at Chester July 18, 1689; graduated B.A. in 1708, and M.A. in 1710.

He devoted two years to the improvement of his estate in Armagh Co. He was sent by the Duke of Marlborough in 1714 on a political mission to the court of Hanover, where he witnessed, in the Herrenhausen Garden, the sudden death of the Electress Sophia on June 8, 1714. He accompanied the royal family to England after the death of Queen Anne, and was made secretary to the Prince of Wales (George II). He married in 1717 Lady Elizabeth Diana Capel, eldest daughter of the 2d Earl of Essex. Her fortune was £10,000, and she inherited £18,000 with Kew House, on the death in 1721 of Lady Capel of Tewkesbury, her great uncle's widow. Mr. Molyneux formed schemes for the improvement of the navy, which his colleagues actively opposed, and these contrarieties perhaps hastened his death through the development of brain disease inherited from his mother. He was seized with a fit in the House of Commons and after lingering a few days in a stupor died April 13, 1728, aged 38. He was a man of winning manners and obliging temper, and united Irish wit to social accomplishments. His inflexible integrity seemed to stand in the way of high advancement. On the death of his widow, 1730, Kew House was leased by Frederick, Prince of Wales. It was demolished in 1804, and a sun-dial erected by William IV in 1834 now commemorates the observations made there. Samuel Molyneux presented one of his telescopes to King John V of Portugal.

NOTE.—Mrs. Delany in her Autobiography, under date 16th April, 1728, thus alludes to his death:—"Mr. Mulinex is dead, the rabbit merchant; he married a sister of my Lord Essex's."

522. William Molyneux.

Lawless in his History of Ireland says:—

The early half of the eighteenth century is such a very dreary period of Irish history that there is little temptation to linger over it.

Two men, however, stand conspicuously against the melancholy background. The first of them was William Molyneux, "The Ingenious Molyneux", as he was called by his contemporaries, a distinguished philosopher whose life was almost exclusively devoted to scientific pursuits. He was one of the chief founders of the Assoc. Royal Society, and a friend of John Locke, with whom he constantly corresponded. Both his letters and those of his brother, Dr. Thomas Molyneux, show everything connected with the natural history of Ireland. Now it is moving bog which has scared the natives in its neighborhood out of their senses; now again some great find of Irish elks, or some tooth of a mammoth which has been unearthed, and it is gravely discussed how such a large "bodied beast" could have been transported over seas, especially to a country where the Greeks and Romans never had a footing, "and where therefore the learned Mr. Camddius theory that the elephants bones found in England were the remaining ones of those brought over by the Emperor Claudius, necessarily falls to the ground." Both the Molyneux's belonged to a band of Irish Naturalists whose members are unfortunately limited.

William Molyneux's chief claim to remembrance rests upon a work published by him in favor of the rights of the Irish Parliament in the last year but one of the seventeenth century, only seven years therefore after the treaty of Limerick. As one of the members of the Dublin University he had every opportunity of judging how the grasp which the English Parliament maintained by means of the absolute machinery of Poynings act was steadily throttling and benumbing all Irish enterprise.

In 1698 his remonstrance known as the "Case of Ireland", famous from being burned by Act of Parliament made in England, appeared with a dedication to King William. It at once created an immense sensation, and was condemned as seditious and libellous by the English Parliament, by which the work in token of its utter abhorrence was condemned as seditious, and to be burned by the common hangman.

Few things will give a clearer idea of the extraordinarily exasperated state of politics at that time than to read the remonstrance which produced so tremendous a storm. Take for example the words with which the earlier portion of it closes, and which are worth studying if only for the impressive dignity of their style, which not a little foreshadows Burke's majestic prose.

“ To conclude, I think it highly inconvenient for England to assume the authority over the Kingdom of Ireland. I believe there will be no greater arguments to convince this wise assembly of English Senators how inconvenient it may be to England to do that which may make the Lords and the people of Ireland think discontent. The laws and liberties of England were granted about 500 years ago to the people of Ireland upon their submission to the Crown of England. How consistent it may be with true policy to do that which the people of Ireland may think an invasion of the rights and liberties, I do most humbly submit to the Parliament of England—consider. They are men of great wisdom, honor and justice, and know how to prevent all future inconveniences. We have heard great outcries and deservedly, on breaking the edict of Nantes and other stipulations. How far the breaking of constitutions which has been 500 years standing exceeded these I leave the world to judge.”

In another place Molyneux again vindicates the dignity of Parliament, etc. His father, Samuel Molyneux, was a master gunner and officer of the Irish Exchequer. He had distinguished himself in the war of 1641–52, and although offered the Recordship of Dublin clung with fondness to his own profession, making experiments in gunnery and construction of cannon at private butts of his own.

William Molyneux, of the house of Molyneux, famous for centuries as a family of fighters, b. 1656, d. 1698; his great grand father was S. De Calais in 1581, fell into the hands of the enemy was ransomed for 500 crowns - went to Eng. in 1568, was sent to Ireland in 1576 by Queen Elizabeth. Sir William Molyneux served under the Duke of Prince - his grand-mother distinguished himself at Agincourt - his g. g. fell in the battle of More-Herth. Later on a Molyneux captured two standards at Flodden Field and another fought at Worcester as a Royalist.

William Molyneux entered Trinity College, April, 1676, and having taken out his bachelor's degree, proceeded to London, and entered at the middle temple in 1675.

While diligently studying law, his attention was also toward the scientific pursuits. He returned to Dublin in 1678, and soon afterwards married Lucy Domville, daughter of the Irish Attorney-General. In 1683 was formed in Dublin the Philosophical association and Royal Irish Academy. Sir William Petty was president, and Molyneux acted as secretary. Its first meetings were held in a house on Cork Hill. He now became acquainted with some of the leading personages of the times, and through the Duke of Ormand's influence, was in 1684 appointed engineer and surveyor of the King's buildings and works.

Next year he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society, and sent by the government to survey fortresses on the coast of Flanders. He passed on to Holland and France, and in Paris became acquainted with Boreilli the famous mathematician. In 1686, soon after his return, he published an account of the telescope dial invented by himself. The following year he had the pleasure of reading advanced sheets of Newton's Principia sent him by Halley.....During the war of 1689-91 he resided at Chester, where he lost his wife. He then occupied himself in the composition of a work on Droprice. On his return he was appointed one of the commissioners of Fortified Estates with a salary of £500. But the task was suited neither to his taste nor his feelings. He was indifferent about money, and soon resigned.

..... Molyneux.

A friend of Locke.....An ordinance passed by the English Parliament in the 5th year of his reign (Edward III). "That there shall be one and the same law for the Irish and English" is frequently referred to in the once interesting controversy with which Molyneux, as the friend of Locke connected his name.

NOTE.—It is stated that "The Case of Ireland" written by William Molyneux which was burned by the Public Executioner in 1812 by order of the British government was read by Thomas Jefferson, and that he drew from it many of the principles which he embodied in "The Declaration of Independence".

25—470. Thomas Molyneux, Esq.; b. in Dublin, April 14, 1661, physician-general of the army in Ireland; created a baronet of the Kingdom July 30, 1730; m. Catherine, dau. of Ralph Howard, Esq., of Shelton.

Sir Thomas Molyneux bought himself a house in Peter street, Dublin. He was elected President of the College of Physicians of Ireland, Oct. 19, 1702, and held the office 1709—15—20, also Physician-General to the army. He occupied a position in Ireland the same as that of Richard Mead in England; but in mental activity as well as highest qualities included in the term good breeding, he excelled Mead. Sir Thomas d. in 1733 and was buried at Armagh Cathedral, where there is a statue of him by Roubiliac.

NOTE.—Thomas Molyneux was educated at Dr. Henry Ryder's school in Dublin, and entered Trinity College in 1676. He was graduated M.A. and M.B. He sailed from Dublin in May, 1683, rested at Chester, and was introduced to Bishop Peirson, whom he recognized from the frontispiece of his "Treatise on the Creed". May 12, he arrived in London and took lodgings at the Flower de Luce, near St. Dunstan's Church in Fleet street. He called upon Nehemiah Graw, and there met Thomas Burnet, author of "Theoria Telluris", and Robert Boyle, at whose house he was introduced to Sir William Petty, and Dr. Edward Browne, and on May 23 attended a meeting of the Royal Society in Gresham College and saw Sir Isaac Newton, John Evelyn, and Dr. Edward Tyson. He enjoyed the conversation of these famous men as well as that of John Flamstead, the astronomer. Early in June he visited Eton and saw King William and Queen Mary at supper at Windsor. He saw "that extraordinary platonick philosopher", Dr. Henry More, and was surprised at the purple gowns of the Trinity undergraduates. He also visited Amsterdam, Haarlem, and Utrecht, and finally entered the university of Leyden. Here he met Locke, who afterwards wrote a letter to him from Utrecht on Dec. 22, 1684, thanking him for his kindness. In 1711 he built himself a large town house in Peter street, Dublin, and in 1715 was appointed state physician. In 1715 he published an account of an elephant's jaw found in Cavan, and in 1725 "A Discourse on Danish Forts". In 1727 he wrote but did not print "Some Observations on the Taxes paid by Ireland to support the Government". —(Dublin University Magazine, Vol. xviii, where many of his letters are printed in full.)

- 888. John P. Molyneux, a priest, at present is a member of the faculty of St. John's College, Brooklyn, N. Y., besides being a member of the trustees and treasurer of the institution.

He was one of the band of American pilgrims, 250 in number, who marched through the streets of Rome, and assisted at the mass celebrated by Bishop Shanley of Sioux Falls, South Dakota, and afterwards admitted to the Papal Gardens, after having visited which they were admitted to the Sistine Chapel, where a reception was held for the Holy Father, Leo XIII.

It is stated that one of the privileged among the audience was the Rev. Father John P. Molyneux, C. M., a special delegate to the Holy Father to make a presentation in honor of the Silver Jubilee of the pontificate of Leo XIII. It consisted of a seal of the Pecci family. The seal was mounted on a small gold Tiara. The donor of this beautiful gift was Sir George P. Pope, commander of the Knights of St. Gregory. The Rev. Father Molyneux was instrumental in obtaining a high ecclesiastical honor for Mr. George Pope. After the Rev. Father Molyneux had made his address and presentation Monsignor

FATHER JOHN MOLYNEUX, ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE, BROOKLYN (SON OF 477-A)

Besletti remarked to the Holy Father that Father Molyneux had a personal offering to make his Holiness, and the Holy Father immediately inquired what it was, and said he would gladly accept any token of respect from the young priest. A box was opened which contained a new white callotte (a cap constantly worn by the Pope). This cap was placed on the head of the Holy Father and the one which was taken from the Saintly Father was given as an exchange to Father Molyneux. Besides, the Holy Father placed his hand on the head of Father Molyneux and blessed him and told him to convey the same benediction to his friends and relations at home.

When the Americans saw one of their party in possession of such a rich treasure they kissed it and placed their rosaries in it at the same time, enthusiastic with joy at the gift awarded their American pilgrim. The cap is now in the possession of the Rev. Father John P. Molyneux of Saint John's College, Brooklyn, N. Y., and will be venerated as a relic of one of the most saintly, learned and beloved of pontiffs.

Robert Molyneux became a convert to the Roman Catholic church at the time of his first marriage, about the age of 19. This caused an estrangement with his family. He carried on a chandler business in Dunlavin, but went to Kingston; then to Ballymor Eustace, in County Kuddy; then to Dublin, where he retired from all business and became a gentleman. He was a man much respected and very proud of his family name. A holy water spout in the Roman Catholic church of Dunlavin records the name of Robert Molyneux as a benefactor.

ROBERT MOLYNEUX, Esq., DUBLIN, IRELAND (25—480)

He also left by will the sum of twenty-five pounds to be expended on a square tablet to be erected with a white marble cross in the Roman Catholic cathedral, Marlborough street, as it was his desire to have his remains placed in one of the vaults of the cathedral. Bequests were also left to Saint Mary's Roman Catholic asylum for industrious female blind of Merrion Castle, Merrion, County Dublin; also for the asylum for industrious male blind, at Prospect Glassmevin, to the Sisters of Charity and Saint Vincent's hospital; also to the Roman Catholic institution for the deaf and dumb, to the Night refuge, Brickfield Lane, Cork street, Dublin, founded by the Very Reverend Doctor Spratt.

by Lieut. Col. Henry Jackson; arrived at Camp April 17, 1777; discharged May 5, 1777, service $21\frac{1}{4}$ days. Company marched from Boston to Rhode Island. William Molyneux subscribed to regulations for formation of an independent company to be raised in Boston; officers of said Boston independent company commissioned in council Dec. 7, 1776, Maj. John Hancock to serve as colonel, Henry Jackson to serve as lieutenant-colonel.

591. Michael Molyneux; private Capt. Elias Parkman's detachment; engaged July 2, 1778; discharged July 17, 1778, service 15 days. Detachment drafted to serve as guards; also pay roll for same service dated Boston. Capt. Michael Molyneux d. 1798.
592. John Molyneux; d. 1826. Brass founder, celebrated for his superior work.

He was probably the first maker of the circular bar andirons, 75 years ago at least. He was then an elderly man. Brass andirons were made by John Mollineux, a brass founder located on Marshall's Lane, corner of Creek square, at "the Boston store" from 1808 till 1843 or 44. He was a man of mark and superior workman, a man of public spirit, and a member of a Republican Institution and Mechanic association. In his day the brass andirons of his make were among the first selections for parlor adornments. They were fashionable as late as 1850, when the introduction of open coal grates sent many brass founders into manufacturing brass-mounted open grates instead of andirons. Subsequently to this the andirons were made in New Briton and of cheaper material, and are now sold only in the far west. But Molyneux in his day was first and best on andirons in Boston.

593. Edward Molyneux. Took in Suffolk Co., Feb. 24, 1777, the oath required by congress on entering into the army.

WILLIAM MOLYNEUX

Boston, 26—534. William Molyneux, a distinguished and patriotic merchant of Boston; died there Oct. 22, 1774, aged 58.
 Mass.,
 U. S. A.

Like Revere he was of Huguenot ancestry. About the year 1760 he with William Phillips and others established the manufactory on the east side of what is now Hamilton Place. Here the people were taught spinning and weaving free of cost. This building was put up in 1768, Molyneux from the beginning of the dispute with the Mother country was an active and influential Whig, member of the "Long Room Club" formed in 1762, and of the Sons of Liberty in 1765; was one of the Boston committee of correspondence from its origin in 1772 and spokesman appointed by the Liberty Tree meeting Nov. 4 to request the consigners to resign. He took active part in all public meetings that followed. Molyneux and Dr. Young were the only prominent leaders of the people who were known to have been actively present at the destruction of the tea.

Molyneux was a member of a committee of which Samuel Adams was chairman to demand the removal of the British troops from Boston. John Adams relates that Molyneux was obliged to march by the side of the troops, to protect them from the indignation of the people.

With the exception of Samuel Adams no name is oftener found in connection with public acts of the day than that of William Molyneux, and his death a few months before the war broke out was a great loss to the patriot cause. While the Boston Port bill was under discussion in the British cabinet, Governor Hutchinson was told by Lord Mansfield that the Lords of the Council had their pens ready to sign the warrant for the transportation to England and trial of Adams, Molyneux, and others, for high treason, but were prevented by the doubts of the attorney and solicitor-general as to the sufficiency of the evidence to convict them.

A committee consisting of William Molyneux, Dr. Joseph Warren and Benjamin Church, and others waited on them at Clark's warehouse at the foot of King (now State) street, where with a number of friends they had assembled. Molyneux was spokesman.

“ From whom are you a committee ? ”

“ I am one,” said Molyneux, and he named the rest.

“ What is your request ? ”

“ That you give us your word to sell none of the teas in your charge, but return them to London in the same bottoms in which they were shipped. Will you comply ? ”

“ I shall have nothing to do with you,” was the rough and peremptory reply, in which the other consignors who were present concurred.

Molyneux then read the resolve passed at Liberty Tree, declaring that those who should refuse to comply with the request of the people, were “ enemies to their country ” and should be dealt with accordingly. On the following Monday Samuel Adams, Joseph Warren, and Molyneux were then desired to acquaint Messrs. Clark and Faneuil that the town expected immediate answer from them.

Samuel Adams, Hancock, Warren, and Molyneux were the most prominent of the popular leaders; they apprehended fully the responsibilities. They had a great principle to maintain, and the courage to uphold it.

William Molyneux was a prominent merchant who gave his sympathy to the cause of the people. He was one of the committee who demanded the removal of the troops after the massacre of March 5th, 1770. He was one of the Indians comprising the "Tea Party". He was also one of the promoters of the Spinning School in Longacre. He died before the outbreak of hostilities.

..... DECEMBER 19, 1760.

ORIGIN OF THE REVOLUTION OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

"Petition in memorial was presented to the General Court on the 19th of December, 1760. As the signers were the principal business men of the town, their names here given as a necessary to show to the head and feet of the opposition to the Crown Officials, then resident of among them. These names are found—John Avery, William Molyneux, etc. This circumstance was the origin of the Revolution.

"Oct. 27, 1768, large and commodious stores on Wheel-right's Wharf were hired by William Molyneux, attorney of Mr. Aphrop, at 300 lbs. sterling per annum for the reception of the regiments from Ireland when they should arrive May 5th, 1769. The gentlemen chosen to instruct the representatives were Richard Dana, John Adams, John Ruddock, Drs. Church and Warren, Joseph Henshaw, and William Molyneux (often spelled Molineux), July 28, 1769.”

“ A meeting of the merchants of Boston to take into consideration the late movements in England relative to the reduction of duties, etc., etc.

“ The merchants saw through this and declared that such reduction would by no means relieve them from the difficulties under which they labored. At the same meeting a committee was appointed to prepare a statement of the embarrassments and difficulties.

“ The Trade Labors under by means of the late Regulations and Revenue Acts, and also of a true representation of the conduct of the Commissioners and other Officers of the Custom by the same, before the merchants of the next meeting. The gentlemen who had this in charge were Arnold Wells, Esq., Mr. William Dennis, and Mr. William Molyneux, and others,—6th of March, 1770.”

“ March 6, 1770, after the so-called Boston Massacre in King or State street, a meeting of the citizens adjourned from Faneuil Hall to the old South Meeting House appointed a committee of fifteen to wait upon the Governor and Council and request the removal of the troops from town. The committee returned and reported that the troops which had fired would be withdrawn. This was voted not satisfactory and a committee of seven from the larger committee was sent to the Governor, among the seven William Molyneux.”

THE BOSTON MASSACRE, MARCH 5TH, 1770

Frederick Kidder says: “ A town meeting was held at Faneuil Hall on the day after the massacre at eleven o'clock, but in consequence of the great concourse of people was adjourned to Rev. Dr. Sewall's meeting house. The committee consisted of John Hancock, Samuel Adams, William Molyneux and others, as a 'committee' of the town of Boston.

" Boston, March 12th, 1770. Jeremiah Allen of lawful age testified that on the eve of the 5th day of March, being about 9 o'clock, in the front chamber of the house occupied by Col. Ingersol, in King street, he heard some guns fired which occasioned his going to the balcony of said house where he was in company with Mr. William Molyneux, jr., and John Simpson being near them, saying to them at the same time pointing his hand towards the Custom House 'There they are out of the Custom House.' "

ARTICLE 53. GLEANER

" On that portion of the lot east of the passage to the present Beacon street, William Molyneux built in the next county a splendid mansion, having acquired the land in 1760, which had come down from Turner, through his sons-in-law John Fayerweather, Benj. Alvord, and John Alvord."

After William Molyneux died (1774), the estate passed to Charles Apthrope, and was confiscated when in 1782, the Commonwealth sold Daniel Dennison Rogers, who acquired other lands hereabout as is shown in the Gleaner, article No. 42, while in No. 37 the same investigation has traced the title to lots in Beacon street from Mt. Vernon to Somerset street, taking in the Governor Bowdoin estate, just east of the Molyneux House. After some vicissitudes a title was conveyed to John Eringin, 1756, to James Bowdoin, and its subsequent history is given in article No. 39.

English good sterling—Madeira and Malaga Wines—Currents, etc., are openly advertised in the papers as for sale by W. and J. Molyneux, in State street, with the announcement that hard or paper money, French, Spanish, or Dutch bills of exchange would be received in payment of the above goods.

His father, Robert Molyneux, set him up in business, but he did not succeed and had some words with his father in regard to money matters, and left Ireland with his young wife and infant daughter, Mary Monica, for America, in or about the year 1847. He first lived in Brooklyn, L. I., then went to Michigan, afterwards moved to the village of Penn Yan. In 1850 he moved to Seneca Falls. Here on June 22 a son was born and christened in the Roman Catholic church, Robert Anthony Molyneux, Michael Dowling, godfather; Mary Dowling, godmother. With money gone, Anthony Molyneux worked with Thomas J. Paine in the chandler business in 1849-51. "He possessed a process for the manufacture of candles which required no snuffing, put in an ordinary candle ” (signed John L. Paine).

In 1851 Anthony Molyneux left his young wife and two children, saying he was going south to Virginia in order to enter a college as teacher of languages (of which he spoke seven). He left Seneca Falls in 1851, saying he would soon send for his wife and children, but this was the last ever heard from him. Sometime after “ In a dream his wife saw him murdered ”. This dream so impressed her that she gave her daughter Mary Monica to the care of a family by name of Gifford, her infant son Robert Anthony Molyneux (then 10 months) to Mrs. C. M. S. Jackson, and started to find her husband. Reaching Geneva, N. Y., but a few miles from her late home, she was stricken with fever, from which effects she died Feb. 7, 1853. On her death bed she spoke of a brother in Dublin, Ireland. On her death her daughter, who had been taken by the family of Gifford, was re-christened Alice Molyneux Gifford.

Oh Alice, thou hast left many friends in deep sadness,
Fond hearts that once cherished thee here;
We often have shared in thy mirth and thy gladness,
United in soul by a tie very dear.

Thou art gone from this world and its changes forever
Thou wilt gladden no more thy dear friends' fond sight;
Those pleasant blue eyes we shall meet again never,
For darkness has quenched all their lustre and light.

Thou has finished thy work, yet we ever shall cherish
 A remembrance of thee and thy life's early close;
 Thy treasure are laid where they never will perish,
 And in safety with them will thy spirit repose.

BREVET MAJOR-GENERAL EDWARD LESLIE MOLINEUX, U.S.A.

War Record of Maj. Gen. Edward L. Molineux (Molyneux), Col. 159th New York Infantry. Battles of Opequan, Fishers Hill, Middletown

Brevet Maj. Gen. Edward Leslie Molineux (Molyneux) was born Oct. 12, 1833. He first became identified with the National Guard of New York in 1854; subsequently joined the Brooklyn City Guard (13th regiment) and passed through several grades of non commissioned rank, his membership being terminated by his acceptance of an important mission to S. America.

At the outbreak of the Civil War he was among the first to volunteer in defence of the Union, enrolling himself as a member of the 7th regiment. He was one of the foremost promoters of the 23d of Brooklyn, when brigade inspector of the 11th Brigade; subsequently un-animously elected lieutenant-colonel of the 23d regiment.

In August, 1862, as lieutenant-colonel he raised the 159th regiment of New York volunteers; was mustered into the United Service the following November as full colonel, and assigned to the Banks expedition with his regiment. He commanded a detachment of Gen. Banks's army, protecting the right wing of the main body during the feint against Port Hudson.

On August 14, 1863, during the battle of Irish Bend, Col. Molineux was severely wounded in the jaw while leading a charge.

As soon as his wounds permitted he returned to active service, and participated in the various fights of the Red River campaign, was appointed assistant inspector-general of the department of the Mississippi; afterwards provost marshal-general and commissioner for the exchange of prisoners.

He was made military commander of the Lafourche District, Louisiana, and assigned to the duty of organizing state troops or independent companies of Louisiana Scouts.

Upon the construction of the celebrated dam at Alexandria Col. Molineux was given command of all the United States forces on the north side of the Red River. After the campaign he was ordered north with his regiment, joining General Grant in the operations against Petersburg and Richmond. He organized a provisional division of the 19th Army Corps, re-enforced Gen. Sheridan in the valley, and participated in all the engagements and battles of that campaign.

He was promoted Brigadier-General by brevet for conspicuous gallantry and zeal at Fisher's Hill, Winchester, and Cedar Creek.

At the close of their campaign, his brigade was sent by sea to reinforce Gen. Sherman, and Gen. Molineux was placed in charge of the works at Savannah of Fort Pulaski and Tybee. He was instrumental in saving the ship "Lawrence", in recognition of which the New York Board of Underwriters voted him a service of plate.

He was made military commander of the district of northern Georgia, with headquarters at Augusta. He seized and secured to the United State government counterfeit and bullion to a very large amount, over 70,000 bales of cotton, quartermaster and missionary stores, aggregating in value $10,000,000, and government buildings and factories of great value. His administration of affairs was marked by wisdom, uniform courtesy and kindness, combined with a bold execution of the military law. Gen. Molineux won the esteem of the entire community, receiving the thanks of the city and council and merchants of that city for his honest and fair treatment of the people of the town.

He returned to civil life with the rank of Major-General by brevet "for gallant and meritorious services during the war". He was subsequently made Major-General of the 2d Division National Guard, State of New York.

He has a for a number of years been connected with the firm of F. W. Devoe and C. T. Reynolds, New York City. He has contributed valuable articles to periodicals on subjects relating to physical culture in public schools, the suppression of riots on railroads and in cities, and on various military subjects.

Although he has been frequently nominated for office he has persistently declined political preferment. He is an active member of the military order Loyal Legion, Grand Army of the Republic and of various public and charitable associations.

General E. L. Molineux is to give his three swords, all of which were presented to him, to his three sons, Leslie, Roland, and Cecil. Two of the blades have war records.

The third is highly valuable because of personal associations. The sabre which is to be presented to Leslie is the one he carried through the Civil War. It was presented to the General in 1862. It bears this inscription: "To Lieutenant-Colonel E. L. Molyneux, 159th N. Y. Vols., from the Citizens of Brooklyn." At Morganza, La., a confederate took deliberate aim at General Molineux and fired, but the bullet struck the scabbard and glanced aside, killing the horse. At Irish Bend, La., he was wounded and carried off the field unconscious. The scabbard and belt were cut from him, and left on the field, but the saber was tied to his hand. General Dick Taylor, C. S. A., a son of President Taylor, sent the scabbard from the rebel lines under a flag of truce. All through the Red River Expedition, the siege of Fort Hudson, Deep Bottom, Petersburg, and Savannah, General Molineux wore his prized blade. It is an extremely light Austrian Cavalry sabre.

The second sabre, which Roland is to have, has a gold plate, bearing the words "Presented to E. L. Molineux, Colonel commanding 159th N. Y. V., by the officers and members of the 23d Regt. N. G. S. N. Y., May 7th, 1865." Its history abounds with romance. It was sent to him at Augusta when he was in command of the district of Georgia. Ten years ago he sent it in care of the captain of a vessel which was carrying arms to the Cuban insurgents—to an officer of Garcia's band whom he knew. The officer was killed and the sabre lost until a few days ago, when the general received a letter from A. C. Grabo of 111 Fifth Avenue, saying that a few years ago a sabre with his name upon it had been found in an old storehouse in Port au Prince, Hayti. The saber came back last week, and its dented edge was an eloquent witness of the bravery of the Cuban who wore it. The third blade was presented to him by friends after the war, when he was appointed by Governor Grover Cleveland Major-General of the Second Division of the state troops. It was made at Tiffany's. The straight blade is of steel richly inlaid, and the scabbard is heavily decorated with the arms of the United States.

General Edward L. Molineux in relating his experience when in charge of the exchange of prisoners in Georgia in the Civil War after Sherman's "March to the Sea" tells this anecdote: In one instance there was a non-commissioned officer of the Union Army whom General Molineux was anxious to have exchanged, but he had no Confederate prisoner to give back in return. He told his predicament to the Confederate officer detailed to negotiate exchanges, and after an extended conference the Confederate officer made this proposition, that General Molineux should give him a bottle of whiskey like that he had drunk in General Molineux's quarters, also a quire of letter paper and a package of envelopes. The negotiations were mutually satisfactory; General Molineux got his man and the Confederate officer secured what was of most value to himself.

28—781. Thomas Molyneux, younger son of Sir Thomas Molyneux, 5th Baron, was a sailor.

He first served five years as midshipman in H. M. S. Platagence, was engaged in the attack on the French fleet by Admiral Cornwallis on August 21, 1800; assisted in the landing of the army in Portugal in Aug., 1808 and at its re-embarkation during and after the battle of Corunna on January 17 and 18, 1809. He was then transferred to H. M. S. Sabrina, and accompanied the expedition to Walcheren in July, 1809; served in the squadron of gun-boats in the Scheldt covering the disembarkation of the army, and at the bombardment and capture of the fortress of Ter Vere, Ramakins, and Flushing. He landed with a division of sailors on the island of South Beveland; was present at the taking of Fort Batz, and on duty there during the repulse of several attacks made by the French and Dutch flotilla on it; was in frequent gun-boat actions covering the retreat of the army on its evacuation of the islands in December, 1809, and in consequence of fever contracted on this occasion, was invalided and discharged by an order from the admiralty soon after landing in England in 1810.

He next obtained a commission in the army and joined the 4th Foot in the Peninsula in 1811; was promoted lieutenant in the 77th Foot in 1812, was engaged at Ciudad Rodrigo and Badajos, at the operations on the Bidassoa and Adour, the affairs at St. Jean de Luz and the Mayor's House at Bidart, and at the investment and surrender of Bayonne; and finally was sent home in charge of the wounded and invalids of the fifth division in August, 1814. He was author of the "Explanation of the XIX Manœuvres" (1819), issued prior to Dunda's Drill-Book of 1825. He received the decoration of the Royal Hanoverian Guelphic Order, and the war medal with a clasp for Badajos in 1848, thirty-four years after the work was done, thanks to the exertions of Charles, fifth Duke of Richmond, but for whom he and his comrades would never have had a medal at all. He died a lieutenant-general.

EXTRACTS FROM CAMPING IN SOUTH AFRICA AND EGYPT BY MAJOR-GENERAL W. C. F. MOLYNEUX

Major-General W. C. F. Molyneux in his Introduction of Campaigning in South Africa and Egypt speaks of the life of a soldier as a hereditary profession in his family. His father was a soldier of whom Sir John Keane (afterwards Lord Keane of Ghuznee), commanding in the West Indies, wrote to Lord Worcester Sept. 6, 1824: "His regiment best shows his qualifications as an officer, for in my life I never saw a corps so near perfection." "This corps was the old 77th Foot and my father was its adjutant."

He then gives handed down traditions of a famous soldier high in the confidence of William, Duke of Normandy, of one knighted for services in 1286 in Gascony; a third who with Edward the Third at the taking of Calais in 1347 got a fleur-de-lis added to his shield; a fourth who was knighted by the Black Prince on the field of Navaret in 1367, and afterwards buried in Canterbury cathedral; a fifth who distinguished himself at Agincourt in 1416; a sixth slain at the battle of Bloreheath in 1459; a seventh knighted on Flooden Field in 1513 and given a tiger passant proper on a crown or for his crest; and adds, "All these records then made us two boys mad to go to the wars; and it seems that others of our line were affected in the same way, for about twenty relations followed the drum or went to sea."

He then gives account of his appointments and a record of his campaigns until he entered the retired list on the last day of 1887. On page 158 I take this note:

As we rode home that day, the Prince Imperial and I were walking our horses a little behind the rest, talking over all sorts of things, while half a mile away in all directions were scouting parties of irregulars. Some days before when out with Colonel Harrison and Bettington's men the Prince had gone straight for some Zulus on a hill, who luckily had bolted. Reverting to this I asked him why he had risked his life, when the death of one, or even of a dozen Zulus would not affect the success of the campaign.

"You are right I suppose," he said; "but I could not help it. I feel I must do something."

Just at this moment a shot was fired on our left. I looked across and saw the man who had fired riding on quietly reloading. If he had fired at a Zulu, he had killed him; if he had fired at a buck he had missed it; he was neither hurrying nor dismounting; the conclusions were plain enough. Yet there was the Prince, going sword drawn, at full gallop for the man; I could have no chance of catching him, and in the dusk he might break his neck in the wild ride.

"Prince I must order you to come back!" I shouted.

He pulled up at once, saluted, returned his sword and said nothing for a minute; then he broke out: "It seems I am never to be without a nurse;" and a moment after, "Oh, forgive me; but don't you think you are a little phlegmatic?"

I reminded him what he had just owned about the affair with Bettington's men, and he laughed, saying that I had answered him rather neatly. "Some day" he added "in Paris, I hope, I will be your guide, philosopher and friend."

How could one help loving a boy like that brave fellow, daring to rashness and determined to make a name for himself to add to the records of his race ?

It was on the 28th. I was assisting at the laager-making this day, and did not think of much beyond it, except that I had seen the cavalry doing some very pretty parade drill about two miles off over the neck, and had wondered why on earth they were not ten miles to the front. That evening as I was in my tent, working out the distances for the next day's laager, Ernest Buller came in.

“The Prince is killed,” he said. “A colonel has brought in his horse; the near wallet is torn half-way down. Carey, who was with him, has gone to tell the general.”

It was so; the torn wallet on the near side was the awful proof that the horse had got away from him when trying to mount; and we knew that if dismounted, disabled, and abandoned, there was no chance of mercy from the Zulus.

There was not much to say; there was too much to think about—of the terrible luck that pursued our dear chief—of the Empress, whose love and ambition were centered in her only son,—of what they would say in England to Englishmen leaving a Napoleon to his fate,—of what they might think of English officers in France after such a proof of our chivalry,—of the loss we all had sustained in our bright young comrade.

It was useless to attempt anything then; the night was too dark for any chance of finding the body, and that the Prince might still be alive no man dared to hope after hearing Carey's report. But it was decided that the cavalry, with the mounted irregulars, should start the first thing next morning for the scene of the tragedy. Dr.

Scott and myself were to go with them to represent the General, with Frere to represent his father, the high commissioner.

On the next morning accordingly, so soon as it was light enough to see, the party moved out of camp on its melancholy errand. Lieutenant Carey rode with us to show us the way; and with Scott, Frere, and me came the Prince's two English servants, Uhlmann, his French valet, having been left behind at Durban.

The march was very slow with much trumpeting. *

* * The bodies of the two men of the Natal Horse were soon found; and then Captain Cochrame, 32d Light Infantry (at that time commanding the troop of Natal Basutos) called the attention of Scott and myself to another body at the bottom of a donga, which on being reached was discovered to be that we were in search of.

It lay about two hundred yards north-east of the kraal, and about half a mile south-south-west of the junction of the streams. It was stripped with the exception of a gold chain with medallions attached, which was still around the neck; the sword, revolver, helmet and clothes were gone, but in the grass we discovered his spurs with straps attached, and one sock marked N. His sword and boots were recovered later. The body had seventeen wounds all of them in front, and the marks on the ground and on the spurs we found indicated a desperate resistance.

As soon as the cavalry arrived, a stretcher was made with lances and horse-blankets, and the body carried from the donga up the hill homewards by Major-General Marshall, Captain Stewart, Colonel Drury Lowe, and three officers of the 17th Lancers, Scott, Bartle, Frere, and myself, with M. Deleage, correspondent of the Figaro, who expressed a wish to assist which was immediately granted.

It was not long before we met the ambulance, in which the body was then laid and escorted back to camp by officers, parties of the Dragoon Guards, and Lancers.

Early next morning the body was laid in a tin-lined coffin and with all the Prince's effects. At Martizburg and Durban the remains were received with all possible honor. H. M. S. Boadicea, the new flag-ship, carried them down to Simon's Bay, whence they sailed for England in H. M. S. Orontes. On July 12 they reached Camden Place, Chislehurst, in the charge of Lieutenant-Colonel Pemberton, 60th Rifles.

In England the young Prince was given a soldier's funeral amid every token of love and regret, with our Sovereign's four sons as supporters for "him who lived the most spotless of lives, and died a soldier's death, fighting for our cause." He now rests at Farnborough.

The spot where he fell in Zululand is marked by a cross bearing the following inscription:

"This Cross is erected by Queen Victoria, in affectionate remembrance of Napoleon Eugene Louise Jean Joseph, Prince Imperial, to mark the spot where, while assisting in a reconnoissance with British troops on the 1st of June 1879, he was attacked by a party of Zulus, and fell with his face to the foe."

In another place, page 213, General Molyneux speaks of the Transvaal. He says: "It was left to the Prime Minister of England in 1881 to applaud these Boers under the description of a 'people rightly struggling to be free', to surrender the Transvaal without reasserting our rights, and to exact no reparation whatsoever for this foul murder.

I do not profess to understand the ways of statesmen; I will merely give two maxims by great soldiers. When the Transvaal was annexed in 1877 the treasury was practically empty, the Boers did not pay their taxes, their commanders had been beaten by Sekukuni; it may be said in short that as one speaking in the Reichstag had said: 'A weak government is a misfortune for any country, and a source of danger to its neighbors.' When Napoleon heard of the capitulation of Baylen in 1808 he exclaimed: 'That an army should make a shameful surrender is a blot on the French name and a stain upon its glory. It would have been better that they had all perished. We can find more soldiers, but national honor, once lost is never recovered.' Comment on these two maxims must be superfluous."

the window panes which formerly did service in the Red House Tavern at Sudbury, Mass., there is within these words:

“ What do you think,
 Here is good drink,
 Perhaps you may not know it.

 If not in haste
 Do stop and taste
 You merry folks will shew it.”

Underneath this is written the name of the author, and date, “ William Molyneux, Jr., Esq., 24 June, 1774, Boston.” This window glass was removed from its setting and placed in a frame for safe keeping.

“And, flashing on the window-pane,
 Emblazoned with its light and shade,
 The Jovial rhymes, that still remain,
 Writ near a century ago,
 By the great Major Molineaux, Whom Hawthorne has immortal made.”

AN ESCAPE FROM FLAMES

R. A. MOLYNEUX AND HIS SON AT BEAVER RIVER—FOREST
FIRE DROVE THEM TO A SWALE, WHERE THEY LAY FACE DOWNWARD UNTIL DANGER WAS PAST
—THE FIRE ABOUT TUPPER LAKE

Robert A. Molyneux of 1206 South Salina street returned this morning with his 14-year old son, Robert R. Molyneux, Jr., from Beaver River, where the two passed through a most exciting adventure yesterday afternoon, and had a narrow escape from death in the forest fire that is raging through the Adirondack regions.

Mr. Molyneux described his experience. "We were in camp just below the Beaver River railroad station on the Beaver River," he said. "Yesterday morning when we started out for the day's fishing we saw that the woods were on fire to the north of us, but were not alarmed, as it seemed that the fire was too far away to reach us. We dropped down the river in the boat with the guide and began fishing.

HOME OF ROBERT A. MOLYNEUX, SYRACUSE, N. Y., U. S. A.

“Along in the afternoon my son looked up and saw the dense volume of smoke rolling overhead. ‘I think we had better get out of this,’ he said, and when I saw the flames and the smoke I thought so too. So I told the guide to pull up anchor and we started up the stream.

“We had gone only a little way when it became very evident that we would have to hustle to get to shelter or else run the risk of being cut off in the stream by the flames. Just ahead of us were the abutments of the railroad bridge and beyond that in the woods was a little clearing, which if we could reach it meant safety. So we pulled for the place and reached it just about in time. In an instant we had drawn the boat up on the shore and had it emptied. No sooner was it emptied than the guide put it on his shoulders and hurried to a place of safety.

“The boy and I lingered behind to get together our traps, and then started after him. But before we started the flames had leaped across the river and were roaring in the trees on all sides of us. The path leading to the clearing was entirely cut off. There was no escape in that direction. On two other sides of us were clumps of spruce and pine surrounded by dense underbrush. On the fourth side lay the railroad track with high embankments of gravel, and rock leading to the bridge. On one side of it was a little swale of damp ground around which the trees had been cut down.

“I saw at once that our place of safety lay on that embankment and along side the swale— I pulled my handkerchief from my pocket, wet it and laid it across my face and saw that the boy did likewise. Then we made our way through the smoke to the tracks and lay down on the embankment near the swale face downward.

“The fire was raging all around us. It leaped from tree to tree with incredible swiftness. We could hear the squirrels shriek as the flames struck them, and we could smell the odor of burning flesh. We knew what their fate was.

“For over half an hour we lay there until the flames had passed on, leaving the smoking underbrush and trees. Then we made our way back to the landing place and waited for the guide, who before long appeared with the boat, and rowed us back to camp, for the fate of which we were much worried. We discovered everything here safe, however; the underbush around the place had been cleared away and the people left in the camp had fought the flames with dirt and with brush. All our traps had been taken to a place of safety so that we had a lucky escape all round.

“The fire in the woods,” said Mr. Molyneux, “was a very disastrous one. This morning we came out of the woods, and as far as Tupper Lake there are miles that are being swept by the flames.”—Syracuse Evening Herald, April 30, 1903.

THE LATE EARL OF SEFTON

As people flocked homeward last Monday after witnessing the Queen's journey to Kensington, the sight of closely-drawn blinds at No. 37, Belgrave square told passers-by that William Philip Molyneux, fourth Earl of Sefton, had succumbed to his long illness. The intelligence, though sad, could hardly have come as a surprise upon any of those to whom the late Earl's welfare was an object of solicitude, yet in Lancashire his decease, though not by any means sudden, was received with every expression of regret. The late Earl came of an old family, for his ancestors were rewarded by the conqueror with many broad acres, and one De Molines, a Norman ancestor, came over with him. The Molyneux family has no doubt bred many sportsmen; but no records of their sport are to be found until we come to the time of the grandfather of the late Earl, who, in the year 1800 bought the hounds of Mr. Meynell, and hunted the Quorn county in princely style for a couple of seasons.

Lord Sefton was a very heavy man; but a bold horseman, and to him is erroneously attributed the originating of the plan of having second horses in the field. That he indulged in this luxury is unquestionable, on account of his weight, so some say; or on account of the great value of his horses, according to others. At any rate, Lord Sefton did no more than follow in the footsteps of other far older sportsmen in this respect.

His lordship was also a capital coachman, and was a prominent member of the Four-Horse club, the rival of the Benson Driving club, while three years before his death, which occurred in 1838, he joined the Richmond Driving club founded by Lord Chesterfield. The late Earl was also a good coachman; he was a member of the Four-in-Hand Driving club; but attended no more than on one or two occasions during the last ten years or so.

Lord Sefton was educated at Eton, and as Lord Molyneux joined the Grenadier Guards, and was present with his battalion in the Crimea. On the death of his father in 1855 he succeeded to the estates and quitted the army. The grandfather of the late Earl, the Master of the Quorn, registered his colors, white body, yellow sleeves and cap, in 1829, and had a few horses in training, Souvenir, Bobadilla, and Juryman being among the best. The late Earl in 1862 registered his as "Zingari"; he was an enthusiastic cricketer, and frequently entertained the eleven at Croxteth Park. Than this, however, Lord Sefton went no further towards any active share in racing; but he was an ardent supporter of the Aintree meetings, generally entertaining a large house party and driving his coach to the course.

In the county of Lancashire the Seftons are great landholders, and for a few years Liverpool had two race courses competing one against the other for patronage as keenly as possible. The first was formed by Mr. Bretherton, a proprietor of coaches which ran to Manchester and other places, and Mr. Bretherton had no doubt often been at Manchester and seen the success of the meetings held there, and how popular they were with the public. That would be about 1829, but the Maghull race course was not exactly adapted for the requirements of the Turf, even as they were in those comparatively primitive times. The art of looking after a course was then but imperfectly understood, and the neglect to watch over a brook led to the course being flooded, and the opening meeting was held in very adverse weather. Then after a few years, Mr. Lynn of the Waterloo Hotel went to Lord Sefton and offered to pay him rent of some of his land four or five times the sum at which the land had previously been let. Terms were arranged, and for some few years, that is to say down to 1834, rival meetings were held at Maghull and Aintree, and then, the former breaking down, Aintree was the survivor. In earlier days Lord Sefton was a successful pigeon shot, and he was no mean hand at covert and partridge shooting.

Lord Sefton was born in 1835; married in 1866 the Hon. Cecil Emily, a daughter of Lord Huyilton. The late Earl is succeeded by his eldest son, Viscount Molyneux. His lordship is very popular on the turf and at his best has few superiors during the winter season. Three years ago he rode twenty-three winners out of eighty-five mounts. A serious accident a year ago however has kept him out of the saddle. The new lord Sefton's brother, the Hon. Osbert Cecil Molyneux, as most coursers know, has for two or three seasons past had a kennel of greyhounds under the care of John Coke, at Birkdale. Like his much regretted father, he is a member of the Altcar and Ridgeway clubs, and there are more unlikely things than the chief of the coursing prizes of the year falling to his lot in the near future. Mr. Molyneux is in the 2d Life Guards. The remains of the late Earl of Sefton were interred in the family vault at Kirby, St. Chad's church, near Liverpool. Queen Victoria and the Prince and Princess of Wales sent memorial wreaths.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE LADY SEFTON AT KIRBY

With the simple service of the Church of England, the mortal remains of the Countess of Sefton were on Tuesday laid to rest in a plain grave beneath the western window of St. Chad's church, Kirby, the only other interment in the space reserved for the Sefton family having been that of the late Earl of Sefton, over whose grave an unpretentious headstone appears. All the arrangements were most unostentatious, and the funeral was as private as possible. The remains reached Edgehill Station from London about three A. M. on Tuesday, and were removed in the early hours of a frosty morning for a brief halt at Croxteth Hall, and thence on a plain carriage at noon to the church. The hour of the funeral was sunny and many of the tenantry and servants gathered to watch the mourners and join in the service within the church or about the grave. The chief mourners were the Hon. Osbert Cecil and the Hon. Richard Molyneux (sons), Colonel Caryll Molyneux (brother-in-law), Captain Henry Molyneux (nephew), Viscount Downe, the Hon. Osbert Craven, the Hon. Sidney and the Hon. George Jolliffe, the Earl of Derby, Major A. Hopwood, Colonel Custance, and Colonel Wyatt. There was a large gathering at the grave-side.

The Rev. J. Leach, M. A. (Vicar of Kirby) and the Rev. Percy Stewart (Vicar of West Derby) conducted the service, the hymn in church sung by the choir, being "Lead Kindly Light" and that at the grave "On the Resurrection Morning." Simultaneously with the funeral of the late Countess of Sefton, a memorial service took place at St. James Chapel Royal, London, which was largely attended.

DEATH OF THE 5TH EARL OF SEFTON

There passed peacefully away on Monday morning at his ancestral home, Croxteth Hall, near Liverpool, Charles William Hylton, 5th Earl of Sefton, and the deepest sympathy goes out to the members of his ancient race and their friends in this hour of their sore bereavement.

A son of the 4th Earl, he was born on the 25th of June, 1867, his mother being the Hon. Cecil Emily, a daughter of the first Baron Hylton, and succeeded his father just four years ago. Educated at Eton College, he while Viscount Molyneux served as lieutenant in the Lancashire Hussars (Yeomanry Cavalry), acted as aid-de-camp to the Earl of Zetland when the nobleman was Viceroy of Ireland, and for a time, like his father before him, he was in the diplomatic service, being an attaché to the British Embassy at Paris.

A fearless rider, he met with an accident while steeple chasing at Aintree, just previously to his accession to the Earldom, being thrown from his horse and sustaining injuries the effects of which never altogether left him, the brain having become affected. For a time his condition was regarded as hopeless; but under tender nursing and skilful medical treatment, he rallied and soon after his father's demise was conveyed to Croxteth Hall. There he was devotedly watched over by his eldest sister and a staff of nurses, but every exertion put forward on his behalf availed not, for as has already been stated he died on Monday, having been in a state of unconsciousness since the previous Friday. .

Of a most amiable and cheerful disposition, the 5th Lord Sefton was greatly beloved by his immediate family circle, by his brother officers, and indeed by all who came in touch with him during his too brief life.

Liverpool's regret over his death is expressed by the drooping of the flag of the Town Hall at half mast.

During his prolonged illness the estates of Lord Sefton were managed by trustees, the heir presumptive, his younger brother, the Hon. Osbert Cecil Molyneux, who succeeds to the title and the patrimony, acting along with them. The new Earl, who is 30 years of age, was married to Lady Helena Mary, 3d daughter of the 4th Earl of Bradford in 1898. In accordance with the expressed desires of the Molyneux family the funeral of the 5th Earl of Sefton on Thursday was marked by as much privacy as was consistent with the interment of a member of the House of Lords.

The remains, enclosed in lead, with an outer case of beautiful oak, having plain massive brass mountings, were removed by the park carriage way, in mid-afternoon from Croxteth Hall to Kirby Parish church, the same private brake being used which bore the remains of the 4th Earl in 1897 and his Countess a year later.

The coffin was covered with beautiful wreaths, but no pall was used. The interment was beneath the western windows of the church, beside the graves of the 4th Earl and Countess, to which very unpretentious headstones have been attached. A plain brick grave was lined with evergreens and white chrysanthemums. The inscription on the coffin read: "Charles Hylton Molyneux, 5th Earl of Sefton, born 25th June, 1867, died Dec. 2d, 1901."

MOLYNEUX—MONTGOMERIE

LOSELEY PARK, SURREY

Loseley in the Co. Surrey about twelve miles from Guilford, the seat of James Molyneux, Esq., (but now tenanted by his brother-in-law John Sparks, Esq.).

1066.....At the period of the Domesday survey, that remarkable starting-point in England's history, this manor was held in chief by Roger de Montgomery, who had command at the central-division of the Normans at the battle of Hastings.

Loseley, with other manors, was awarded to him out of the spoils in requital of his services on that bloody day, the advantages or disadvantages of which are not completely understood, even at the present hour.

In the feuds that subsequently took place, he espoused at first the side of Robert Courthouse, but eventually passed over to that of William Rufus. He died in 1094, in the time of Henry III. Loseley Manor was held by Hugh Delor (Deol, Dol.), but on the death of his grandson, Robert, it passed to the daughters of the latter, as co-heiresses, namely Joan and Margret. Of these the first named married John de Bures, and her sister, John de Norton. Each of them retained a moiety of the estate till in time these portions were severally conveyed from their descendants to the families of Waterbrook and Cross.

LOSELEY PARK, EAST SIDE FROM GARDEN

This after a while led to the re-union of the hitherto divided parts of the estates and in this manner. In the year 1395 Cross's share was purchased by William Sidney, Esq., of Stoke, L. Abernon. In 1515 John Westerbrook, Esq., at Godalining, sold his half to Christopher Moor (More), whom we have already seen in possession of one-half the estate. Having thus acquired to himself the whole of Loseley, Mr. More succeeded in obtaining from the crown a grant of free warrant with license to create a park.

The enclosure comprised two hundred acres of the land or perhaps something more, the soil whereof as result has since proved was admirably calculated for the growth of forest timber. His son, William, appears to have been a prodigious favorite with Queen Elizabeth, whose sagacity was not often deceived into bestowing confidence upon those unworthy of it.

On two occasions, perhaps oftener, she honored him with a visit at his mansion, once in 1577 and again in 1588, as appears from undeniable records. Before this he had been knighted (1576) by Dudley, Earl of Leicester, in her presence, upon which she gave him her hand to kiss, observing that "He well deserved the honor which she had conferred upon him." The illusion in all probability was to his conduct during his two shirevalties of Surrey and Sussex, and yet more perhaps for the service he had rendered the crown as Vice-Admiral of the latter country, where he enforced with equal purchase and vigor the admiralty rights on the shore of his allotted district.

The son of the fortunate sheriff was no less successful than his father had been in securing the especial good-will of royalty. From this source he obtained a large augmentation of the family estates, the Lordship and Manor of Goldslining in Surrey being granted to him by Elizabeth in 1601. Neither was he less a favorite with King James I, however opposed in all his tastes and habits to his high-spirited and sagacious predecessor.

By the royal pendant this deacon, as he supposed himself in king-craft, he was honored with the chancellorship of the Order of the Garter, and finally made lieutenant of the tower, when Sir Gervaise Elives was removed from that post for his supposed or real participations in the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury.

*With Sir William More, the direct line of inheritance failed in this family, he dying without issue, and the baronetage which had been granted to his father, Sir Poynings, as a matter of course became extinct. This estate then passed to the Rev. Nicholas More (Molyneux), a younger brother of Sir Poynings, at that time rector of Fletcham, in Surrey, but who did not live long to enjoy his good fortune.

His son Robert having died unmarried in 1689, he was succeeded by his two sisters as co-heiresses to the estate. Of these Elizabeth also died unmarried, and then the property was conveyed by marriage to Sir Thomas Molyneux, Bart., of Sefton in Lancashire. (The issue of this family became extinct.)

Sir Thomas Molyneux died in 1776, when Loseley passed into the possessions of his sisters; they too died unmarried, and we are told by Kempe in the Loseley manuscript, James More Molyneux, Esq., who is now the representative of that branch of the family, which became by intermarriages with female inheritor of More the possessor of Loseley, derives the property in virtue of his descent from the above Thomas Molyneux, who died in 1776.

There are still remaining some vestiges of a moat, which seems to show that Loseley had in time long past a fortified mansion, the usual accompaniment in feudal ages of every locality adapted to such a purpose. If, however, an edifice of the kind, as we suppose, existed here, it has left no trace behind.

The present modern pile—modern that is by comparison—was erected by Sir William More. It is built of greyish stone, in Elizabethan style of architecture, and is no more than the uncompleted center of what was intended when finished to form a square, or at least the three sides of a quadrangle. A western wing was added by the founder's son, but this was removed a few years ago, though it must have been a striking feature, and of considerable extent, for it composed a chapel and a gallery, the latter being a hundred and twenty-one feet long by eighteen wide. It may be said there is a general character of uniformity in the building, but the same is by no means preserved throughout in architectural details.

If all the windows are alike square-headed, they are far from being even to the eyes of similar dimensions. The largest are those appropriated to the principal apartments, and these are divided into many lights, mullions, and transoms. The great hall is 45 feet by 25 feet, having the bay or oriel window.

There are warriors' emblazements, and among them the arms of the More family, with the date 1568, but instead of the military weapons, which at the time figured here, they are now ornamented with more modern, as well as more peaceful guise by pictures. The drawing-room in the decorative Elizabethan style is particularly deserving of notice. Upon a cornice highly enriched, is the rebus of the Mores, a mulberry tree intersecting the motto: "Mours morcum cito moriturum." This is open to many interpretations of the inventive. Kempe explains it to signify: "That the family stock like the mulberry tree, should be of long endurance, but the individual descendants, like fruit, should by the common lot of mortality, be subject to a speedy decay."

The chimney piece in this room has been by many considered highly curious. The two parts which compose it are upper and lower, the last the Corinthian order, and consists of two pillars, with a bracket on either side, supporting a Carytide beneath each bracket.

The pedestals on which the whole is based are festooned and ornamented with various sculptures, all in excellent preservation. The brackets at the side of the mantel uphold a fascia and cornice, the Carytide being of a grotesque character, and in various attitudes. The ceiling of this room is adorned with pendant drops, and moulded Gothic tracery, the figure of the cockatrice being frequently repeated among its involutions, and panelled with emblazoned shields of arms.

LOSELEY—GREAT HALL

LOSELEY—CHIMNEY PIECE IN DRAWING-ROOM—CARVED-CHALK

Many interesting portraits are presented in this old mansion that carry back the imagination far into other times. Here we find the portrait of the beautiful but unfortunate Anne Boleyn, wife of Henry VIII. Here, too, is Sir Thomas More, Chancellor of the Bluff, tyrant, but who with all his wit and wisdom, could not escape the common fate of all who came within the same influence. King James I and his Queen Anne of Denmark, originally brought here on a visit of the royal pair to Loseley in 1603.

The park is extensive, and abounds in fine timber of various descriptions. Large plantations of fir are to be seen upon the rising ground which skirts it towards the west, the rapid growth of which kind of wood too often tempts the planter to the exclusion of noble trees. To be sure it will thrive, and in this respect has good claims upon our toleration; although if the oak be as has been often called "the monarch of the woods", the fir is unquestionably the lowest of its plebeians. A small sheet of water within the limit of the grounds, adds considerable life and variety to the landscape.

VENTRY

This noble family derives its origin from the same source as those of Sephton, Houghton and Teversal; Sir Richard Molyneux or de Moulins, or de Molenes, of Sefton in Lancashire, Knt., its immediate founder, having been the 12th in lineal descent from William de Moulins, who accompanied William the Conqueror to England. This Sir Richard signalized himself in the wars of France, under King Henry V, and in consequence of his bravery at the celebrated battle of Agincourt he was knighted by the gallant Monarch. He married Joan, the widow of Sir Peter Leigh, of Lyme Regis, county Dorset, Knt., dau. of Sir Gilbert Haydon or Haydock of Bradley, Knt., in England; by whom he had amongst other sons (15—86) William de Molins, issue Richard, whose son William des Molines or Mullins of Burnham in County Norfolk; m. Jane, dau. of Ludlow, of in the county of; issue Frederick William Mullins; b. at Burnham in 1616, settled in Ireland, where he obtained grants of lands in the province of Ulster, which he afterwards sold, in order to purchase estates in County Kerry, called Ballingoldin, &c., &c. TRADITION:—Taken from Memoir of the Molyneux Family by Gisborne Molineux, F. R. C. I.

In the third year of Henry VII anno. 1424, a violent quarrel, arising out of the disputed limits of the family possessions in Liverpool, sprang up between Thomas Stanley the younger, afterwards Lord Stanley, and Sir Richard Molyneux of Sefton. From the report of the facts made the Chancellor of the Diocese by Ralf of Ratcliffe and James of the Holts, Justices of the Peace, it appears that they had some difficulty in preventing a pitched battle between the retainers of the two powerful families. The justices reported that having heard that there was "great rumor and congregation of routes" between these two honorable persons, they and Sir Richard Radcliffe, the sheriff of Lancashire, proceeded to the house of Sir John Stanley, in Liverpool, where they found "Thomas of

Stanley with a multitude of people in the town, to the number of 2,000 men or more," waiting to receive Sir Richard de Molyneux, who was expected to enter the town immediately for the purpose of attacking the Stanleys. With some difficulty the sheriff succeeded in arresting Thomas Stanley. They afterwards arrested Sir Richard Molyneux, whom they found marching from West Derby "with great congregation, route, and multitude, to the number of 1,000 men, or more, arrayed in manner as to go battle, and coming fast towards Liverpool town." The sheriff subsequently received from the Chancellor of the County Palatine the following mandamus from the King: "Henry, King of England and France, Duke of Ireland, to his Chancellor of the County Palatine of Lancaster sends the following mandamus:

"We command, &c., that Thomas, son of John Stanley, soldier, now residing in my Castle of Cliderow, shall withdraw himself as far as the Castle of Kenilworth; and that Richard Molyneux, soldier, residing at the Castle of Lancaster, shall withdraw himself as far as the Castle of Windsor. Given at Westminster the 3d year of my reign."

The feud between the families was afterwards made up, and the two houses became allied in marriage and fought side by side on the field of Flodden, and later on in support of the Royal cause in the Civil war. The friendship has substituted to the present time, a period of more than three centuries.—Baines's History of Liverpool.

MOLYNEUX

There is a village of Moulineaux, situated at the foot of a hill about ten miles from Rouen Froissar mentions the capture of a Castle of Molineux: "The lorde Courcy and the lorde de Ryer," so runs the chronicle, "besiged Carentyne with great puissance, and at last they dyde so moche, that they had it by treatie, and so it was gyven up to the obeysance of the Frenche Kyng. Thus they had Carentyne, and put therein newe men of warre, and then departed and went to the Castell of Molineaux, and within three dayes they had it by treatie."

Carentyne, or Carenton, is a town in Lower Normandy, situated upon the river Douve.

NOTES TAKEN FROM CHAPTER III.—Memoir of the Molineux Family, by Gisborne Molineux, F. R. C. I.:

Some uncertainty exists as to the precise date when the Staffordshire branch of the Molineux family first settled in the county. The name of Molineux, with those of Townsend, Davenport, Lawley of Canvell, Turton, Heathcote of Longford, Fowler, and Marsh of Wimborne, appears amongst the families who took a leading position in Staffordshire subsequent to the accession of the House of Brunswick. The family had, however, been seated in the county for a considerable period anterior to that date.

From an entry in the register of the Collegiate church of St. Peter, Wolverhampton, it appears that "Joan, daughter of Robert Molineux," was baptized in that church on the 24th January, 1629; and that William, a son of the said Robert Molineux, was baptized there April 24, 1632.

The record of the Parish of Willenhall, near Wolverhampton, records the burial, in 1638, in the church there of Richard Molineux, a descendant probably of the Molineuxes of Thorpe, Co. Notts. This Richard is believed to have been the grandfather of Richard Molineux, of Willen-hall, gentleman, who died April 24, 1723, and who by his first wife, Mary, had two sons—Thomas, baptized July 26, 1669, and Richard, baptized September 10, 1685—besides three daughters, Margaret, Mary, and Elizabeth. By his second wife, Hannah, he had six sons, John, Daniel, William, Thomas, Joseph and Richard, besides a daughter, Hannah. Daniel, the eldest son of the above-named, Richard and Hannah Molineux settled in Dublin.

Joseph, 5th son, married, apparently, as his second wife, Mary, daughter of Thomas Birch, of Lapley, Staffordshire, gentleman. By his will, provided in 1773, he charged his copyhold estate within the manor of Hampstead in the said county, with the sum of £1,000 for the benefit of his children by his said wife.

John* second surviving son of Darcy Molyneux, of Mansfield, Co. Notts, and great grandson of Sir Francis Molineux, of Teversal, Bart., settled in Wolverhampton at the commencement of the eighteenth century, where he engaged in the iron trade, and where Thomas, his eldest son, was born, on the 17th of March, 1704, being baptized on the 22d of the same month. By his wife, Mary, who died in 1735, he had, besides Thomas, four other sons—Richard, John, Joseph, and Benjamin—and three daughters, Anne, Mary, and Elizabeth. He died in 1754; and was buried in the Church of St. Peter, Wolverhampton. He was the immediate ancestor of the eldest branch of the Staffordshire Molineuxes and of the family seated at Lewes in Sussex.

*John Molineux had a cousin living at Liverpool, who had a son John, and a daughter, who married a Mr. Edmondson, by whom she had a son, a colonel in the army, who died in India.—Heralds' College.

Gisborne Molineux,* eldest son of Francis and Sarah Molineux, was born at his father's residence in James street, Buckingham Gate, Westminster, and was educated under a private tutor. He received in 1856 the appointment of secretary to the Canada company, and took active part in the formation of the Royal Colonial Institute, of which society he is a fellow and member of council.

*The Royal Colonial Institute was founded in 1868, the inaugural dinner being held at Willis's Rooms on March 10, 1869, Viscount Bury, M. P., presiding. The Duke of Manchester, K. P., succeeded Lord Bury as president in 1871; and in 1878 his Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, graciously accepted the office, the Duke of Manchester becoming chairman of the council. His Royal Highness, accompanied by the Princess, attended the conversazione given by the Council of the Institute on June 27, 1879, at the South Kensington Museum.... Among those presented to his Royal Highness by the Duke of Manchester was Mr. Gisborne Molineux.....

On April 3, 1872, the members of the Canada club,* in recognition of his services as honorary secretary, and "in token of their regard", presented him with a silver vase and two cups.

On April 2, 1814, the members had the honor of entertaining at dinner at the Freemason's Tavern, his Royal Highness the Duke of Kent, father to her late most gracious Majesty Victoria. At the dinner of the club held May 4, 1881, Mr. Molineux, who presided, in proposing the toast of Marquis of Lorne and the Dominion of Canada, took occasion to refer to the recent death of the Earl of Beaconsfield, and to the "appreciation evinced by him of the value of the colonies to the mother country, and his recognition of the importance of maintaining inviolate the integrity and unity of the empire, being in fact the first British statesman who treated the question as one forming part and parcel of Imperial policy. The course taken by Lord Beaconsfield in this would," he added, "be gratefully remembered and acknowledged, not only by all colonists, but by every one who had the true interest of England at heart."

†Richard Molineux died in 1662. His widow, who died in 1770, bequeathed her copyhold estate held of the manor of Gains, near Upminster, Essex, to her sister, Margaret Molineux; her diamond rings and silver plate to be divided between her sisters, the said Margaret and Mary Blagden.

†At the time of the commercial panic in 1825, during which so many banking establishments were compelled to close their doors, many of the nobility and gentry of the country, including Viscount Gage, Sir John Shelly, Sir George Shiffner, and others, to show their confidence in the stability of the bank, undertook to indemnify for a period of six months the holders of its notes to the extent of £197,000.

ington, at which John Edmondson Molineux and two of his brothers were present, which is interesting as showing how garden parties were conducted half a century ago:

“Fete at Chillington.—T. W. Giffard, Esq.; entertained a numerous and fashionable party on Friday last, the 20th instant, at Chillington. The company assembled at two o’clock at the Grecian temple, on the borders of the pool on the lawn adjoining which several marquees were pitched, and a tasteful rustic ball-room erected. A large union-jack was hoisted in front of the temple, and guns belonging to a fine yacht (the Elizabeth), as well as two on the water’s edge were fired at intervals during the afternoon. After partaking of refreshments in the temple and tents, the majority of the party betook themselves to the water, and a great variety of sailing and rowing boats at once in motion presented a delightful spectacle. The day at this period was particularly bright and clear, and the flags of all nations were displayed on the various vessels, the effect was very brilliant. An excellent band stationed on the margin of the pool, added to the pleasure of the company. At 5 o’clock dancing commenced in the room erected for that purpose, and was continued with unabated spirit till the firing of the large cannon announced that dinner was in readiness at the hall, to which a long train of carriages soon conveyed the assembled party.

“About one hundred and forty sat down to dinner in the grand saloon. After the removal of the tables dancing was again renewed, until about 4 o’clock in the morning, when the party broke up, gratified by the variety of pleasures afforded them by their respected host.”

ASSIZE SERMON

Preached at All Saints' Church, Derby, on Sunday, July 31, 1881, before Sir Watkin Williams, K. B., and the Mayor and Corporation of Derby; by the Rev. Charles Hurlock Molineux (51) VI, Vicar of St. James, Litchurch, Derby, and Chaplain to Her Majesty's Judges of Assize.

"And Samuel judged Israel all the days of his life. And he went from year to year in circuit to Bethel, and Gilgal, and Mizpeh, and judged Israel in all those places."—I Samuel, vii. 15, 16.

From this record, drawn from one of the most ancient books of Holy Writ, we learn that the procession in circuit, the administration of justice at certain centers, at certain fixed times, is of very ancient occurrence. It is easy, indeed, to see that owing to our corrupt and fallen nature the necessity of a assize has been a constantly recurring one. Looking backward upon the days that are past, we can point to no golden age of freedom from crime, and looking forward into the future, the age of universal brotherhood seems yet far distant.

It is true, however, that as years roll on the character of the crimes which occupy the attention of justice changes with changing circumstances. For example, of old, in comparatively uncivilized times, crimes of violence to the person were of more frequent occurrence than at the present day. When the country was sparsely populated, there were temptations which do not now exist for plunder. In the narrow unlighted streets of our towns in the last century, and in the suburbs unguarded by policemen, life and limb were in far greater peril than they are in this nineteenth century, and the older records of crime consequently contain multiplied cases of robbery and violence.

At the same time we must not imagine evil is any the less rampant, that the evil one is any less busy. It is the front only that is changed. England to-day has become one vast store, one vast emporium of commerce, and this intercourse with foreign nations has brought with it countervailing temptations. An age of comparative violence has been succeeded by an age of fraud, and cases of speculation embezzlement, fraud, and commercial dishonesty now figure far more largely in the annals of crime, rendering the judges' circuit as necessary as it was before.

Coming as it does periodically, it is easy to see that every assize acts, so to speak, as an inquisition into the moral state of the country or district into which it is held. It indicates to us as a community our points of weakness. It discovers to us our grey hairs, it draws our attention to marks of decay. Indeed the very fact of an assize being necessary at all should teach us that social improvement is needed, and should quicken in us efforts after self-improvement.

Now on occasions like these—assembled as we are in God's house to ask His blessing upon those called to administer the principles of justice and equity—praying that the judges travelling on circuit, like Samuel of old, may be gifted with the spirit of wisdom and knowledge from above—it is not always easy to speak appropriate words; and it is a great help to the preacher if in the services of the day he can discover some reference or some allusion which may direct the thoughts of his hearers into a profitable channel. And in the beautiful collect for the day we surely have one sentence which is peculiarly appropriate to "Assize Sunday". I allude to the words, "Increase in us true religion." For it is needless to say that all crime, whether open or secret, detected or undetected, proceeds from the want of true religion.

Bear with me, then, if I ask you this day to pray this prayer with all earnestness and sincerity. As members of Christ's Holy Church, as subjects of a great nation I ask you to pray this prayer, "Increase in us true religion." Let this prayer rise up from our lips to-day unto the ears of Him who is the Lord of all power and might—not uttered, however, in self-righteous spirit. God forbid that we should look with a Pharisaic complacency upon any of the unfortunate criminals who shall during the next few days, be arraigned at the bar of justice, and say, "Stand by, I am holier than thou."

Indeed it is quite impossible for any of us to know how far our example and our influence have effected contemporary crime. In God's sight we are all criminals, we are law-breakers—the same frail brotherhood, we are equally capable with them of the most serious crimes—we all need the mercy of God through Christ Jesus.

This is what the Apostle tells us so plainly in his epistle to the Romans. "All" — without exception — "have sinned." The Gentiles have broken their natural law, and the Jews have broken their revealed one, and before God all are guilty. The lack of true religion is confined to no single society. To look upon criminals we need not enter our courts of justice—to find law-breakers we need not take the trouble to go to prison. Such a place of confinement, it is true, is usually associated with those who have flung off entirely the restraints of religion.

But not always. Deprived of liberty are also others, many others, who have fallen through weakness rather than wickedness, and who cannot be regarded as entirely destitute of religion. You will recollect that in the early days of Christianity prisons were tenanted even by holy men and women as well as by the vicious and abandoned, and angelic messengers from heaven's courts traversed the corridors, opened the iron gates, and went out of those cruel places of confinement.

Most erroneous would be the idea that our prayer for the increase of true religion should embrace only the unhappy beings confined within those gloomy walls. Undoubtedly there are those sunk in the very depths of crime, who have taught their conscience to call evil good and good evil, who are described by them who know them best as cruel and brutal beyond measure, who stand in special need of our prayers. But outside the prison walls as well as within them there are also multitudes devoid of true religion. And it is worthy of remark that when our blessed Lord wished to portray the doom of a lost soul He did not draw his illustration from the prison cell, as if that were the surest place to seek for the man destitute of religion. He did not instance the case of a murderer clothed in prison garments, fed on prison fare, and laid in a felon's grave.

No. To point the moral and adorn the tale, a very different character was chosen. It was the rich man, clothed in purple and fine linen, and faring sumptuously every day, buried with all pomp and ceremony. He it was who was so devoid of true religion as to let the beggar starve at his very gates. Outwardly, it is true, the rich man was no transgressor, no law-breaker, no robber, no murderer, no adulterer; but in God's sight deserving of condemnation because he thought only of himself, and lived only for the gratification of his own selfish desires and senses.

Yes; believe me, whether rich or poor, whether bond or free, we have all need to pray to the Lord of all power and might for the increase of true religion—of that religion which has the love of Christ as its root and main-spring, and the duty to our God and to our neighbor as its chief aim and object. And the more prevalent this kind of religion is in the midst of us the less need there will be for the continued recurrence year by year of the periodical assize.

But, my brethren, if these words "Increase in us true religion" need to be upon the lips of our laity, how much more should they be the continual prayer of the clergy—of those who have been called to so high an office of dignity and responsibility, of those who are the watchmen, the stewards, the messengers of their Lord and Master, who are pledged by their ordination vow to live the life of holiness, who have vowed to live in all holy conversation and godliness as examples to the flock, and to teach, to premonish, to feel and provide the members of Christ's body committed to their care.

We sometimes strive to discover and to tabulate the sources of crime, that we may know how to put in train counteracting influences. We speak of the need of education, of the non-observance of the Lord's day, of the facilities to obtain intoxicating drinks, of the negligence of parents, of the influence of bad companions. But there is perhaps one moving cause, one factor in relation to crime which we sometimes lose sight of and perhaps under-value. I mean the lives of the clergy. In every generation it is only natural that the nation as a nation should look to the lives of her clergy, silently and unobtrusively yet effectually to rekindle the ever-waning flame of religion, to stamp afresh as it were upon the nation's life with firm impress the elements of true religion.

What indeed on one hand, is more calculated to quicken the religious pulse of a nation's life than the spectacle continually before its eyes of the self-denying lives of a devoted clergy following in the footsteps of their Lord and Master? And, on the other hand, what element in our national and social life so prejudicial to true religion, so disastrous to the interest of the gospel, as the careless, slothful, ungodly lives of ecclesiastics?

By ourselves more earnestly than by others does that prayer need to be prayed, "Increase in us true religion." Surely sometimes we must pursue with wonder, if not with cheeks tingling with shame, the record of the early love, the early zeal, of the Christian church.

Who amongst us, for instance, after the same interval, could repeat with any semblance of truth those expressive words of farewell which almost choked the utterance of St. Paul as he bade farewell to his beloved converts at Miletus, "Remember that by the space of three years I have not ceased to warn every one of you night and day with tears?"

I read these words, and I read them again, and then only have a faint glimpse of the might of that love and zeal which were ever working in the Apostle's breast. Three long years—thrice 365 days—had he passed in that hot-bed of idolatry, and not one single day had been a lost day. Never, throughout that long period, had the unpleasant reflection been forced upon him, I have neglected my duty; I have lost a day. No, nor even a night, in an ordinary way of speaking. "Man goeth forth to his work, and to his labor, until the evening." The evening is for rest, relaxation, repose. But not so in St. Paul's case. The interests at stake were too precious, and the hours of darkness, as well as those of light, were continually redeemed to the service of his Master. In season and out of season, no opportunity was allowed to escape him.

His warnings too, were universal, addressed not merely to the elders of the church but to all its members without fear or favor; but last, and most important of all, it was the manner in which it was done, the love which accompanied the words; the voice, the humbling, sobbing voice, choked with the tears of a loving heart, which saw in front the terrible penalty of a broken law. This carried conviction to the hearts of those to whom it was addressed.

A tearful ministry. This all-effectual weapon won for the Christian church her early spoils, this proved so potent a force in storming the fortress of evil. The impassioned tears of love; yes, tears, real genuine, heartfelt tears, these are the appeals which move people to seriousness and devoutness, which cause deep searchings of hearts; and never yet has the church sowed in tears but she reaped in joy. Tears are more eloquent than words, and find their way imperceptibly to the hardest of hearts, for they are the expression of the mind of Christ Jesus; and who can tell how a tearful ministry like that of St. Paul might stir up around us a deeper, truer Christianity, and thus have a mighty effect in the restraint of contemporary crime?

Brethren of the laity, pray for us that true religion may be increased in our midst. Pray that we who possess our treasure in earthen vessels may be illumined with true understanding and knowledge of God's holy word, and that both by our preaching and living we may show it accordingly. Pray that we may be the living epistles known and read of all men, that we may be as burning and shining lights in our generation.

We live in a trying time. Like her Master of old, the church has looked around and been stirred with compassion at the multitudes fainting for lack of spiritual food. She has done, and is now doing her best to supply the spiritual destitution, and of churches multiplied, beautified, and restored, there has been a mighty increase.

Along with that increase may we not hope that there has been both among the clergy and laity the seed sown of an increase of true religion, and that in the next generation shall be found a godly seed, who, trained up in the fear and nurture of the Lord, shall have learned to abhor the thing that is evil; when her priests shall be decked with health, and her saints shall rejoice and sing; when our sons shall grow up as the young plants, and our daughters shall be as the polished corners of the temple; when the decrease of crime shall render the circuits of the judges like angels' visits, few and far between; and when a peculiar people, zealous of good works, may be prepared to meet the Judge of all men, when at the last assize He cometh to judge both quick and dead?

MULLENS

Lineage:

Shane Mullens, of Ballyness, near Dungiven, Co. Londonderry, having been implicated in the rebellion of 1641, fled to his kinsfolk, in the county of Carlow, whose property in that county was near Old Leighlin and the Abbey of St. Mullins, and had been previously confiscated. (1849) WILL OF ANDREW DU MOULIN

This is the last Will and Testament of me, Andrew du Moulin of the City of Bath, Esquire.

In the first place I direct that my just debts, funeral and testamentary expenses shall be paid by my executors hereafter named, as soon as conveniently may be after my decease, and that my funeral shall be plain and unostentatious, and conducted with as little expense as circumstances will admit of.

I give my dau., Ann Atcherly, the wife of Rowland Atcherly of Sheldon in the county of Devon, Esquire, M.D., my gold watch and chain. I give to my dear wife, Eliza du Moulin, all my boxes which shall be in my house at the time of my decease, with all their contents. I give to my said dear wife the use of my rosewood pianoforte during her life, and after her decease to my said daughter, Ann Atcherly, absolutely.

I give to my son Nicholas du Moulin the portraits of my father, mother, and myself, which I trust he will preserve and bequeath to his child or children as heirlooms. I give to my said son my tin box with my name thereon, containing deeds and papers which formerly belonged to my uncle, Sir Thomas Moore and my Aunt Lady Manock, together with all the same deeds and papers respectively, the first mentioned tin box and one of the last mentioned boxes with their contents being now deposited for safe custody in the banking-house of the London Joint Stock Western Branch bank, 64 Pall Mall, the other box with its contents being now deposited for safe custody with my trustees Mr. Thomas Norris, Solicitor, and Mr. Macdonnel of 2 Bedford Row, London.

I also give to my said son Nicholas du Moulin my four plated side dishes and covers on condition that he shall accept them in full satisfaction of any claim on me or my estate on account of the loss or deficiency of some half dozen (more or less) of old worn out silver spoons and forks and some other articles which were lost or missed some years since at my residence in Woolcombe Crescent, Bath, and which he would otherwise have had at my death, and also on account of my having been obliged to exchange some of the old worn out forks and spoons to the benefit of which he thereby became entitled, but not otherwise.

And as to the rest, residue and remainder of my personal estate and effects, whatsoever and wheresoever not otherwise hereinbefore specifically bequeathed, I give and bequeath unto and to the use of my said dear wife Eliza du Molin, her executors, and administrators and assigns absolutely. And inasmuch as I place entire confidence in her affection for our children I have no doubt she will make a proper and suitable division of the property between our two daughters, Ann Atcherly and Josephine du Moulin, my said son being already sufficiently provided for, and to this intent I would suggest to my said wife that in disposing of the property between my said two daughters it would be desirable to give the said daughter Ann Atcherly two-thirds thereof, in consequence of her being married and having children, and to limit the said shares to the separate use of our said daughters.

I would also suggest that in the event of the death of either of my said daughters in the lifetime of my said wife without having issue her share might with propriety be given to her sister. But I hereby expressly declare that the several recommendations, suggestions, and clauses hereinbefore contained shall not have the force or effect of imposing a trust on my said wife, or in any manner abridge or qualify her property and interest in my said estate or effects and premises any rule of equity to the contrary notwithstanding.

Also I devise to my said wife all estates, tenements and hereditaments, which now are, or at the time of my decease, may be vested in me as a mortgagee or trustee, subject to the trust and equities affecting the same respectively. And I hereby nominate and appoint my said dear wife Eliza du Moulin, Executrix of this my Will and hereby revoking all former wills by me at any time heretofore made, I do declare this to be my last will and Testament.

In witness whereof I have to this will contained in two sheets of paper and to a duplicate thereof contained in like number of sheets, set my hand this twenty-eight day of November in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-nine.

Signed and declared by the said Testator Andrew du Moulin as and for his last Will and Testament in the presence of us present at the same time who in his presence at his request and in the presence of each other have heretofore subscribed our names as Witnesses.

ANDREW DU MOULIN.

GRANVILLE HILL, Solicitor, Bath.

JOSEPH PERKINS, his clerk.

NOTICE

At a meeting of the undersigned Trustees of Guilford Academy, it was voted that the subject of education be brought before the citizens of this village and vicinity, with the hope that something might be done to place the school in a more elevated situation than it is at the present time.

We therefore give notice, that there will be a meeting for that purpose at the Court House in Guilford, on Monday the 3d day of December next at 6 o'clock P. M. All in the neighboring towns and villages who feel an interest in the improvement and extended usefulness of this institution, are earnestly and respectfully invited to attend.

HISTORY OF THE SIEGE OF BOSTON, AND OF THE BATTLES OF LEXINGTON, CONCORD AND BUNKER HILL, BY RICHARD FROTHERING, JR.

In this book we see Samuel Adams, James Otis, Warren, and Molyneux.....caucusing in a distillery counting room, "a very small one," too, crawling up into "Tom Dawes garret", and there "smoking of tobacco till you cannot see from one end of the garret to the other". But we do not undertake to say when and where "the child of Independence" was conceived, though John Adams has told us, "when and where it was born."

 BRITISH SOLDIERS AT BOSTON, SEPT., 1774

To the Officers and Soldiers of His Majesty's Troops in Boston :

It being more than probable that the King's Standard will soon be erected, from rebellion breaking out in this province, its proper that you soldiers, should be acquainted with the authors thereof and all the misfortunes brought upon the province, the following is a list of them, viz. :— Mess. Samuel Adams, James Bowdoin, Dr. Thomas Young, Dr. Benjamine Church, Capt. John Bradford, Josiah Quincy, Major Nathaniel Barber, William Molle-neux, John Hancock, William Cooper, Dr. Chauncey, Dr. Cooper, Thomas Cushing, Joseph Greenleaf, and William Denning. The friends of your King and country, and of America, hope and expect it from you soldiers, the instant rebellion happens, that you will put the above persons immediately to the sword, destroy their houses and plunder their effects; it is just they should be the first victims to the mischiefs they have brought upon us.

CAPE DE ARENAS—MOLYNEUX GLOBE

Molyneux Map, 1600. This map which claims attention in that projected by Wright and engraved by Molyneux in 1660. This map is celebrated as being the "New Maps" referred to by Shakespere in "Twelfth Night" (Act 3, s. 2). The map shows the influence of the English who had colonized Virginia and indicates also that new ideas had been acquired respecting New England. This is very evident from a comparison of the map with a globe made by Molyneux over his globe.

The improvement of the map of Molyneux over his globe in 1592 is very significant and instructive. A description of this map will be found in N. England History and Gen. Register, Vol. XXXV, 1881.

ACCOUNT OF THE ANCIENT CHAPEL OF TOXETH PARK, LIVERPOOL, FROM 1618, CROXTETH PARK

Toxeth Park was the property of the crown, from the reign of King John, until the year 1604, or nearly 400 years. About this period a number of farmers, or cultivators of the soil, of Puritan proclivities, settled on the land. These inhabitants soon gave a tone and character to the whole district, the influence of which was perpetuated.

One memorial of this olden time remains, namely the "Ancient Chapel", built for those Puritans, "the first chapel," says Mr. Davis, "connected with dissent in the neighborhood of Liverpool." The present structure, built a century ago, stands on the site of the original chapel, some of whose important characteristics are preserved, while the burying ground remains intact.

These early settlers in the Park though Puritan in their principles, did not formally absolve themselves from allegiance to the mother church; the time for this open dissent had not arrived. Sir Richard Molyneux, a Roman Catholic, created a baronet in 1811, had purchased Toxeth (Croxteth) Park, and with a liberality worthy of commendation, so unusual in his day, granted land to these Puritans whereon to set a chapel, which was built probably, in 1618, or about the time of the settlement of the Rev. Richard Mather, then first minister.

After the ejection, the chapel continued to be held by the dissenters as a Presbyterian meeting house. Eventually the members became Unitarian in their sentiments.

It is somewhat remarkable that the Society at Toxteth Park, over which the Rev. Richard Mather was settled as the first minister in 1618, and the church at Dorchester in New England, where he was installed in 1631, as the first minister of the church after its reorganization, should have become and still remain Unitarian in their views.

Two lines from epitaph in the church records:

“ Hard to Discern a Difference in degree
’Twixt His bright Learning & Pietie.”

We are informed that “his people at Toxeth were devoted to him and loath to let him go, but duty seemed clear to them, and to him, and he departed.”

SEPHTON OR SEFTON

The seat of the Molyneux’s at Sefton has long since been demolished, but the church is a handsome Gothic building, with a choir and stalls richly carved, and some tombs of the family. The family removed to Coxteth.

“Mr. Molyneux, a knight of great lands, 11 miles from Prescot dwelleth at a place called Coftoffe (q. Coxteth?), Tokstoffe (Tockseat), a park of the King’s hard by his house.” (Camden.)

SEFTON

Sefton before the conquest had 13 manors in it of 3 Borats, with Volney, Gladuin, and Uluric had the land whereof was on Car. This afterwards became the Fee of William Feveral. and there four Vill. two Bord. had two Car. There was a church, and 3 acres of meadow. In Elder time val. 8 s. When the conquerors survey was taken, 10 s.

There was a recovery,—4 Elizabeth of these two manors (Brenly and Brunnesley) wherein John Byron Knt. and Francis Molyneux claimed against Robert Fletcher and Edward Stephenson, who called to warrant Robert Agatha alias Middleton. This Robert Molyneux son of Gilbert, as also Francis his younger brother, buried at Sefton. Aug. 10, 1558. Robert, buried there May 3, 1567, was father of William. Lineage.

ITEM FROM PEDIGREE OF NORRES OF SPEAKE

I doe understand by recorde that Roger Garnet held ij carycates of lond in Speake amongst other lands in the Shyre, & that these ij carycates I fynd that R. Garnett gave with his doughter in fre marriage to Richd. Molleneaux of Crosby & Hynd that Molyne thereby tooke on hym to bee half lord of Speake. But out of these 2 carycates I fynde that Molyneux for service doone gave to Sundry men, and by deeds...sces lond, whereof came to my ancestor in Certaine of his quyte, acres lond I find that Wm. Molyneux gave by deed, without date, gave to Erneys, citizen of Chester and all his londes in Speake with Johan his doughter in liberum maritagium & was a quarter lord in Speake afore ys said ther this is in a Coppie verbantum after Sir Wm. Norres Owne hand writing.

Armagh is the magnificent seat of Sir Capel Molyneux, Bart. In the center of the demesne is an extensive lake, surrounded by verdant hills. Two obelisks were erected here; one by the primate to commemorate the order of Saint Patrick, the other by Sir Capel Molyneux in honor of the Volunteers of Ireland. (Camden.)

The family estates at the death of Sir Capel Molyneux, seventh Baronet, extended over 16,560 acres, of the estimated annual value of £10,000.

Guilford, Loseley House, was built by Sir Christopher More 1562-1568 by marriage in the Molyneux family. (Camden.)

In the Genealogy of Ferdinand III and Alphonso X of Castile and Leon, will be found the record of Alphonso surnamed infans Lord Molina, 1272, wives:

1. dau. of Alphonso.
Telez de Meneses.
2. Monsalda.
Perez Lady of Molina.

Issue:

Mary, wife of Sancho IV, King of Castile and Leon.
Johannali, wife of N. Count of Lux.
Ferdinand* a monk-bishop of Zamora.

*This Ferdinand Molina may have been the priest-founder of the family of Molyneux, as Spanish history and record gives French marriages and estates.

Monumental inscriptions from the Church of Horsted Keynes, Sussex:

MOLYNEUX

Near this place lieth the body of

RICHARD WYATT, ESQ.

Sometimes of Freemans in the Parish.

He died in Jan., 1753.

In the 64th year of his age.

Also the body of Susanna, his wife, daughter of the late Sir Thomas Molyneux, Bar., of Loseley, in the Co. Surry.

She died the 29th day of June, 1774.

In the 74th year of her age.

Sir Richard Molyneux, Knight & Dame Elenor, his wyffe, whose Soules God pdon.

Dame worshope was my guide in life

And did my doings quite;

Dame virtue left me alone,

When Soule from body hyed.

And thoughe that deathe with dinte of Darte

Hath brought my corps on sleepe

The eternall god, My eternall Soule,

Eternally doethe Keepe.

Upon a brass plate on a tomb, which forms the floe of an ancient seat near one of the windows is a Latin inscription, "Pray for the Soul of Margrette, dau. of Richard Molyneux, formerly wife of John Dutton."

On a flat marble in the Chancel are inlaid the effigies in brass of Sir William Molyneux and his two wives, with their representative arms over their heads, and underneath his own shield quartered in two other coats, besides that of Molyneux. With the motto "Endoit devant", on a brass plate is an inscription to the memory of "Gulielmus Molyneux", of the date 1548.

Harriet Molyneux, natural dau. of the late Gen. Thomas Molyneux, Bart., of Castle Dillon, Co. Armagh, m. Sir Thomas Phillips and d. 1832.

Sacred to the memory of Capel son of Maj. Gen Thomas Molyneux and Elizabeth, his wife, of Castle Dillon in the Co. Armagh in the Kingdom of Ireland, who departed this life at Chesterham the 23d of June, 1822, in the 18th year of his age, and whose remains lie interred in a vault in the North side of the church. To the many virtues and departed worth of the most dutiful affectionate and estimable of sons this inadequate tribute has been erected by his afflicted and disconsolate parents.

Emily, dau. of Gen. Thomas and Elizabeth Molyneux, died June 25, 1832; remains interred in the catacombs of St. Martins in the Fields, London.

Anne Molineux, second daughter of Sir John Molyneux by his first wife, Isabel Markham, was buried in the church at Barnby, where, against the south wall of the chancel, near the door, is an altar tomb of freestone, having on the sides the arms of Molyneux, a cross moline, and another shield, a lion rampant, with the inscription: "Here lyeth interred the corps of Anne Molyneux, 2d daughter to Sir John Molyneux of Teversal, in the county of Notts, Knight and Banoret. Which Anne departed this life 3d day of November, 1633, ætatis suae xxvii."

"Whom God doeth love, of them he makes his choice
To wait on him, and here hath stilled her voice,
That with him it might be raised hyer
To sing Halleluiahs in his holy quyer."

Inscription on the tomb of Sir William Molyneux (d. 1289).

"Hic jacet Will'us Molyneux
Bannerettus factus in Gasconia cum illustri Principe Edmundo, dicto Gibbosa com: Lancastrie.
M. C. C. F. XXXIX.

Epitaph on the tomb of Sir William Molyneux, who was made Knight Banneret in 1367, after the Battle of Navarret:

"Miles honorificus Molyneux subjact intus:
Tertius Edwardus dilexit hunc ut amicus.
Fortia qui gessit, Callos, Navarrosque, repressit,
Hinc cum recessit, morte feriente decessit,
Anno milleno trecento septuageno,
Atque bis junge duc, sic perit omnis homo."

Sir Francis Molyneux; d. the 12th day of March, 1741, aged 86. Dame Diana his wife, the daughter of John Howe, Esq., of Langar. She had by him seven sons and three daughters, and departed this life the 8th day of January, in the year of our Lord, 1718, in the 60th year of her age.

Happy in the conjugal, not unhappy in the parental state, they ended their days in peace and in full assurance of a blessed Resurrection.

Sir Charles Molyneux, Bart., fifth son and heir, put up this monument to the memory of the best of parents.

In the Church of the English Austons Nuns, concealed by the fine painting of the Holy Family which hangs against the North wall, is an inscription commemorative of Lady Mary Herbert of Powis, Viscountess Montacute, and Sister Lady Lucy; d. Oct. 30, 1745 (Lady Mary, dau. of Wm. Herbert 1st, Marquess of Powis); m. 1st Hon. Richard Molyneux, eldest son of Caryll, 3 Vis. of Marybough, Earl of Sefton.

Verse taken from the old ballad, "The Scottish Field," a poem on the Battle of Flodden, to the device of an eagle's foot having been worn as a badge by the Lancaster levies who fought in the battle under the command of Sir John Stanley and Sir William Molyneux.

EPIGRAM UPON THE TIMES

I

When Molyneux came first to Town,
 With colors and what not;
 “ See! where the rebels come, see there,”
 Exclaims an angry Scot.

II

“ Rebels,” quoth John, “ I’ve often seen
 At Tyburn where they hang ’em,
 Why, Sawney, look! in all this crowd
 There’s ne’er a Scot among ’em.”

Mouns or Monyn, John, sometimes Molyn, may have been of the family of Molyneux, descended from Sir Simeon de Molyneux (Monyn) Knt. of Castle Mayon in Normandy, who attended William the Conqueror. With this family are found all the family names of the family of Molyneux.

New Rochelle—Rev. Jean Joseph Brumeau de Moulinars came to New York before 1718 (said to be the son of Jean Brumand, Sieur de Moulinars, pastor of the Church of Chatellerant, France, 1683). He was of the family of De Molyns (or Molyneux), which found refuge in Holland, where he appears as a candidate for orders in the Reformed Church. He was a man distinguished for unblamable life and conversation. Mr. Moulinars was called as assistant to Mr. Rou, who refused to go to New Rochelle either to preach or administer sacraments. In the Documentary History of New York there exists two accounts of The persecutions in France, which ensued upon the Edict of Nantes and drove the Protestant subjects of Louis XIV into the territories of other princes. The most opulent settled in the city of New York, others went into the country and planted New Rochelle, and a few settled at New Paltz, Ulster Co. Mr. Moulinars died in New Rochelle in 1714, ministering to the little congregation of French dissenters.

On pages 175, 176, Vol. III, Collectanea Topographica et Genealogica.—On the Charter of Transfer of the Patronage of the Hospital of St. Cross by Winchester, from the Prior of St. John of Jerusalem to Richard Bishop of Winchester, in 1185. Attached to this document are three very perfect seals, the first that of Roger de Molens, Custos or Master of the Hospital of Jerusalem, appended by a lace of yellow silk. It is of lead, circular in form, one inch and a quarter in diameter. One side, a figure kneeling before the double cross, and between them the letters A.M.; Legend + ROGERIUS CUSTOS; on the other, + HOSPITALIS JERUSALEM, with a representation of the Holy Sepulcher, and the Savior's body therein. This is engraved in the Gentleman's Magazine, Vol. CIII.ii.305; together with that of another Master of the Hospital, bearing similar designs.

Collectanea Topographica et Genealogica. Page 124, Vol. III.—Sir John Molyne was lord of the neighboring manors of Stoke Pogies, Brill, Dalchet, Henley, Crippenham, &c., &c. There is much respecting him in Kennet's Parochial Antiquities; as well as in Dugale's Baronage, where it is stated, Vol. ii, p. 146, that among the possessions restored and confirmed to him in 20 Edw. III was the patronage of the Abbey of Burnham, which seems in contradiction to the free right of choosing their Own Abbess granted to the Nuns by No. 7 of the present Charters. But Molyne was so valuable that the house was probably willing to waive the right conveyed by Earl Edward's Charter and accept a new patron upon receiving such a benefaction. See remarks on the Abbey Seal, p. 131, where it says: "The device is of course the common one of Christ crowning his Spouse the Church. The arms are those of the second founder (see note on p. 124), Sir John de Molyns, viz, Sable, on a chief argent, three lozenges gules," &c., &c. On page 126, same book, "Grant of pardon to the Abbess, for receiving without license certain lands from John de Molyns and Roger le Strange, 20 Edw. III, 1346." See page 24 (6—26).

Molyneux, Thomas, b. May 14, 1759, at Manchester, taught by Henry Clarke Byron's short-hand; before he was 17 had become a writingmaster and teacher of accounts in King Edward VI Grammar school at Macclesfield; resigned that situation in 1802 and died at Macclesfield Nov. 15, 1850, age 91. He published "An Abridgment to Mr. Byron's Universal English Short-hand," London, 1796. In the editions published in 1829—1838 the portrait of the author engraved by Raffe from a painting by Scott is prefixed.

Rev. Robert Molyneux, 2d President of the Society of Jesus in 1793—6, also president in 1806—8; called Father Molyneux; b. in Lancashire, England, June 24, 1738; entered the Society of Jesus 1757; in 1806 with authority of Pope Pius II was appointed Father Superior.—From History of Georgetown College, District of Columbia.

NOTES AND CORRECTIONS

6—15. Adam de Molyneux is supposed to be the knight who is portrayed in the glass of the three windows in the upper part of Bridgenorth Church, in the county of Salop, in antique mail, clothed with a surcoat and girt, with his sword and spurs; over which is an equilateral triangular shield, on which the arms of Molyneux are depicted. He was in commission for the perambulation of forests, in the 12th year of King Henry III. He married Lettice de Brenley.

APPENDIX

GLEANINGS AFTER A HARVEST OF TWENTY YEARS IN ROMAN FIELDS

BY MARIE ADA MOLINEUX, A.M., PH.D.

Contributed to the Woman's Branch of the World's Congress Auxiliary in the Department of Philology—Edited by Elizabeth A. Reed, Chairman

Roman history seems to the student a kind of dignified fairy tale written in a formal language, once—so they say—the everyday tongue of the people whose life and adventures are therein narrated. Certain brave deeds and noble men attract him and fire his imagination, but generally it is only when he is years older that he realizes the immense fact that it is all as true as any history. More and more are we coming to know that the main facts are not misstatements, and that, often, the details are correct (or explainable), and this is due to the studies of the archaeologists.

Every letter of an almost obliterated and shattered inscription receives the most earnest attention of those recognized the world over as authorities by reason of native and cultivated gifts.

The discoveries in relation to Roman language and literature are like the illustrations to a book, brightening, explaining, and attracting the attention of those otherwise indifferent.

The soil of Rome is as a palimpsest overwrit with the ideas of many generations, and like a palimpsest requires the tenderest, most pious care, since among the records of a nearer and a present age are to be found the injured and incomplete chronicles of the time when Rome was in her prime. What beautiful relics, when regarded as mere works of art, have been disinterred, relics that aid the student of literature so manifoldly. The remains of buildings, sculptures, inscriptions, articles of personal use, are to the student of the Latin language, literature and history, as studied to-day, what the body is to the mind. The one is incomplete without the other; there is constant action and reaction. These records of the past could not be interpreted without the aid of philology, nor could philology, in turn, be so satisfactorily unfolded without the help of archæology.

The Archæological Commission.—In May, 1872, the Municipal Council of Rome appointed an Archæological Commission, its members being the Chevalier Augusto Castellani, the Marquis Nobili-Vetelleschi, Commander Rosa, Baron Visconti, Commander de Rossi, Chevalier Visconti Count Vespignani (architect), and Professor Lanciani. The Commission was particularly interested in the discovery, presentation, and reproduction by plans and drawings of all incongraphic remains of the ancient city. Those that have been denied the inestimable privileges of personally assisting in the work must draw all information from the records of this commission, of which the secretary is the civil engineer and professor in the University of Rome, so pleasantly known to Americans, Rodolfo Lanciani. Almost immediately was begun the publication of an illustrated bulletin, a mine of information to those interested in archæology.

In any scientific investigation nothing is too trivial to note. Much can often be learned, the uninitiated are astonished to be told, by "masons' marks", by the seals stamped or carved by workmen upon various portions of their work. The lead pipes put in by those long-dead plumbers still retain the name of workmen (they were not afraid in those days that their work would be blameworthy), of the owner of the dwelling or estate, and of the emperor during whose reign the pipes were inserted. It is a regret that so many thousands pounds of lead were remelted for modern use before the importance of its examination was realized; but Professor Lanciani has done marvels with the material at hand in locating so many estates, and thus in filling the vacant space on the map of Rome.....

The defacement of some of our own public buildings may possibly be viewed with more lenient eyes when Macaulay's New Zealander shall be searching for information regarding a people and nation that have vanished. Not that we expect to vanish, but did the ancient Romans deem it possible that their tremendous empire ever could dwindle to a memory?

Important Gains.—When we glance along the list we see that the gains to our certain knowledge during the past twenty years have been enormous.

1. The great Servian Wall has been traced throughout and portions of it are now visible in forty different places. The most important clues were discovered during excavations necessary for laying out a new quarter of Rome, and there were also offered to the inspection of the Commission innumerable tombs of early dates and houses of various epochs. In the destruction of the beautiful Gardens of Sallust and the most priceless adjacent portion of the Servian Wall, gunpowder was necessarily used, so well did the ancient masons do their work. A stone from this wall now rests in America by the tomb of Lincoln.

2. The entire valley of the Forum Romanum has been excavated.

3. The House of Vestals was a most valuable discovery in 1883-84. It is in more perfect condition, as a whole, than even the Pompeian houses, having a portion of its second story. Besides its importance in deciding matters of topography, there were other causes for congratulation, for their came to light eleven life-size statues, twenty-seven busts and heads, fifteen pedestals, with inscriptions describing the life of the high-priestesses, five historical inscriptions, and many other treasures, including eight hundred and eighty-five coins.

4. In some respects still more important was the identification in 1886 of the Regia, the Fane or sanctuary of the Pontifex Maximus, together with the Domus Publica taken from the Pontifex by Augustus and given to the vestals.

5. Horace speaks of a flood from the Tiber reaching the Temple of Vesta; hence, wrongfully, a temple in the Forum Boarium was thus denominated. The terrible flood of 1877 showed the old power of the Tiber and made the poet's words again correct, for the real temple was recently rediscovered, since it was partially demolished and hidden after its discovery in 1549.

6. Perhaps the most remarkable of all acquisitions to our historical data was obtained from the extensive cemetery on the Esquiline. This told that in an early, even a prehistoric epoch, there was a settlement here, and in it the Etruscans, that people of whom we know so little, were the most numerous, and indeed the civilizing element. Among the most valuable objects unearthed were some rare vases of Greek shapes and Egyptian decoration in vitreous enamels. These vases were evidently acquired through Phœnician traders, or else were made in potteries created by them. It is interesting to note that in this cemetery were found real scarabæi; thus we are forced to perceive the intimate relations with Egypt. Many Egyptian relics have been found elsewhere.

7. The line of the Nova Via has been determined.

8. The Gardens of Mæcenas, the Temple of Claudius on the Cælian, the vaulted arches of the Aqua Virgo, the Tiberine Emporium, have all come to light and yielded various treasures, valuable both as regard their art and historical significance.

9. The real form of the Rostra of Julius Cæsar is now known.

10. Many notable mausoleums have been excavated.

11. About seven hundred feet of the Cloaca Maxima, between the Forum Augustum and the Forum Romanum, have been cleared.

12. A very interesting wharf or mole on the left bank of the Tiber, not far from the Bridge of St. Angelo, was discovered in 1891. It was built for the unloading of marble, probably by Augustus.

13. The Porta Salutare has been accurately located, a point of great importance in the topography of Rome.

14. Discoveries on the Capitoline place the Arx, or Citadel, on its proper peak, the northern.

15. About three hundred and ninety feet beyond the Sistine Bridge, were found, in 1887, the ponderous foundations of a bridge, of the existence of which we were entirely ignorant. Near it was an inscription certifying that the embankment of the Tiber had been repaired "ad Pontem Agrippæ". The natural conclusion is that these were the foundations of Agrippa's Bridge.

16. The location of the Comitium and Curia has been placed beyond doubt.

17. The Horrea, or "storage warehouse", of Galba, has been discovered, excavated, and destroyed. It still contained wares, such as lentils, and about six hundred cubic feet of elephants' tusk ivory was also yet there.

18. The barracks of the Imperial Guards, the Equites Singulari, have been found, containing more than forty inscriptions on pedestals of ex voto offerings by the honorably discharged.

19. The barracks of the Fifth company of the Vigiles, or Watchmen, who united three professions, being policemen, firemen, and lamplighters, have come to light. They numbered at times at least seven thousand and had their most palatial barracks in the different quarters of the city assigned to their care.

20. The position of the altar of Dis and Proserpina is now known.

21. The hitherto unrecognized remains of the Temple of Augustus are identified.

Granite Obelisk.—In addition to these really monumental gains in twenty years, are countless lesser in size, but of an importance not at all in proportion. Among the gleanings that we may add to our store are brief notes of only a few.

Of these one of the most interesting is the granite obelisk bearing the cartouche of Rameses the Second, that with many other choice relics of ancient Egypt, was dug up from the Temple of Isis and Serapis.

Architect's Tomb.—An architect's tomb of three stories, decorated with marble bas-reliefs of buildings he designed; the foundations of the arch of Augustus; traces of the incendiary fire mentioned by Livy as having taken place B. C. 214, in the Forum Boarium; the pilaster for measuring the waters of the Tiber, all these have their significance.

Statue of Terra.—A statue of Terra, the personification of the Earth, and with a dedicatory inscription is a work of especial rarity, since seldom is a dedication found to “Mother” Earth, nor is the figure often represented otherwise than in bas-relief; this is of great dignity and beauty of pose.

Two Monuments.—Two monuments of the worship of Fortune were unearthed upon the Quirinal, a female statue and an altar with an inscription; these are of peculiar value as helping to locate the “Street of the Three Fortunes”, so named by ancient writers because of the three temples to the goddess thereon.

Busts and Heads.—Among the objects of art in the form of busts or heads, generally the sole remaining portions of statues, although occasionally there are entireties in design, are notable representations of Juno, Æsculapius, Minerva, Bacchus, Jupiter Ammon, while of portraits there are examples showing the effigies of Faustina the Younger, beautifully executed; of Pompeia Plotina, wife of Trajan, a fine face with serene and lofty expression; of the Empress Manlia Scantilla, and one of her daughters, Didia Clara, a sweet, sad face. There is also a superb bust of Commodus as Hercules, of a fine, slightly self-satisfied expression—a countenance which arouses wonder that its prototype could have so heartily enjoyed the butchery of the amphitheatre; another represents him as a youth in armor.

A fine bust of Flavia, the wife of Constantine, is a very rare discovery, since portraits of her are uncommon; a particularly excellent bust of Faustina the Elder, wife of Antoninus Pius (1877), and a second (1880), of remarkable power; two bronze heads of most beautiful workmanship, but unfortunately much injured by time and circumstance, without doubt likenesses of Nero and Caligula...A superbly sculptured bust of Antonia, daughter of Mark Anthony and mother of Germanicus and Claudius; ...an exceedingly noble bust of Anacreon, an admirable work of spirited pose, most felicitously confirming the name given to a fine statue found in 1835, and so denominated on the authority of an early Greek coin.

Statues and Busts with Color.—Of statues and busts showing traces of applied color, the most worthy of remark are a Venus Andadyomene, a bust of Jupiter... Much of the beautiful stucco was painted or gilded, and often the hair of a otherwise white statue was gilded.

The evidence is considerable that the Romans did degrade some of their marble sculptures by polychromatic decoration; this is not strange when we remember the tendency of the period of their greatest magnificence to “ paint the lily ”.

Other Statues and Groupes.—Of statues or groups to be mentioned in passing, one is that of an orator with his scrina of books; another at first called a Venus, but by some named Atalanta, a figure of expressive modeling and excellent workmanship, lacking the arms which were evidently in the act of binding the hair;...and a (fourth) quite unique statue of Marsyas at the moment of his flaying, of a rare realism because cut in a red-veined marble, really superb piece of sculpture.

Animal Figures in Stone.—Comparatively few animals have been found, but those are all of especial merit. A cow nearly of the size and a faithful following of the model;...a magnificent eagle of natural size with outspread wings.

Notable Sculptures.—Two very interesting figures are of magistrates of the fourth or fifth century. One is colossal, evidently a portrait, and the other, found two months later near the same place, is smaller, of a younger man with rather a sad expression in exactly the same attitude, that of giving the signal for starting in the circus ...At another place during the reconstruction of a private house there was unearthed, at a depth of fifteen feet below the surface a wonderfully preserved group of the three Graces.....

Bronze Statues.—The mention must not be forgotten of three magnificent bronze statues preserved most remarkably, and all coming to light in 1885. One was of the first century, a charming figure of Bacchus, the others had apparently been carefully concealed from plunderers in some far-off age and their resting place forgotten. One was a seated figure of a boxer, and the other a stately standing effigy of a man, supposed to have been Philip the Fifth of Macedonia; both are specimens of early Greek art.
