

Matt Le Tissier sounds the alarm on sudden soccer deaths

Le God Speaks about Sudden Soccer Deaths

Matt Le Tissier, a soccer legend, has earned the nickname 'Le God' due to his remarkable record throughout a 17-year playing career with the Southampton Football Club.

"His talent was simply out of the norm. He could simply dribble past seven or eight players but without speed – he just walked past them. For me it was sensational," according to Xavier Hernandez Crus, former league professional. This highlight video showcases the breathtaking ease with which he scored goals.

Le Tissier was the first midfielder ever to score 100 goals in the Premier League, but his incredible loyalty to his Southampton Team is what earned him the nickname. Despite teams like Manchester United and Chelsea tempting him with 10 million pound contracts, Matt remained true to his home team and became the 'God of Southampton' with roads and other locations named in his honor.

For Matt Le Tissier, some things are more important than money.

His record at scoring 47 penalty kicks out of 48 attempts is among the greatest ever. To say his teammates respect him would be the height of understatement.

And now, 'Le God' is speaking out to protect his revered game and its sacred players from a pandemic of unexplained sudden cardiac deaths. Players are dropping dead at an alarming rate. He is angry that mainstream journalists are not reporting on this.

"It's not rare, let me tell you...I've never seen anything like it. I've played for 17 years. I never saw one person in 17 years have to come off the football (soccer) pitch with breathing difficulties, clutching their heart, heart problems." See mark 23:20.

Some have dismissed these deaths by labeling Le Tissier an "Anti-vaxxer," while others take him seriously, including this writer.

You may recall another article where I reviewed sudden death in the young after vaccination. The report, published on January 24, 2022, points out that sudden death in young athletes is exceedingly rare, occurring in less than 1 in 300,000 to 1 in a 1,000,000.

However, between January 24th and this article's writing, February 7th, a span of roughly 14 days, the number of collapses has increased by 105 – from 513 to 618, and the number resulting in death has increased by 77 – from 305 to 382. All of this in two weeks. Even if these had occurred over two years it would be cause for alarm and investigation.

These odd collapses and sudden deaths that were previously estimated at one in a million events now occur in exponentially increasing numbers, and no one in their right mind can dismiss them as being either rare or natural. And you cannot explain all this away by calling Le Tissier an anti-vaxxer.

Matt Le Tissier gave the following statement during an interview with Oracle Films: "Matt Le Tissier had all of his vaccinations up until this one – so if that means I'm an Anti-vaxxer, that seems a little bit odd given all the vaccinations I could possibly have had in my life – I've had probably 99% of them. So, if not choosing to have one – that by the way – a lot of people don't realize this, but they've had to change the definition of what a vaccine was – for this mRNA gene therapy to be called a vaccine... "It's a really sad way to go about making a living. And there are some journalists who really, really must struggle when they put their head on their pillow at night. They must struggle to get themselves to sleep. And let me tell you this, I go to sleep every night when my head hits the pillow – I'm a very contented man – and I go to sleep very, very well, thank you very much." See mark 15:50.

Matt Le Tissier has a clean conscience. He has no blood on his hands, and he is fighting the good fight by speaking out against Big Pharma to blow the whistle on sudden deaths in his fellow soccer players.

However, after over 100 sudden deaths were recorded in professional soccer players in one year, Matt felt honor-bound to say something.

"There are people who are allowing this to continue when it really shouldn't be. They can't be sleeping at night." See mark 22:02.

"But the last year, it's just been unbelievable how many people, not just footballers, sportspeople in general, tennis players, cricketers, basketball players – just how many are just keeling over -- and at some point, you have to say this isn't right; this needs to be investigated." See mark 24:02.

"It might be that the vaccines are causing these problems. But we need to find out why, one way or the other. There needs to be an investigation. But the fact that nobody in any position of power is calling for an investigation...is a massive dereliction of duty." See mark 24:40.

Matt talks about the double standard in player safety, where the league is concerned that players do not participate in too many matches to protect them from fatigue. Yet, these same overseers have no qualms watching players drop dead right and left.

"It's absolutely disgusting that they can sit there and do nothing about the increase in the amount of sportspeople that are collapsing on the field." See mark 25:24.

Although Le Tissier explains he is not certain that the vaccines are causing these sudden deaths, he is clear that a proper and transparent investigation should be done immediately. Furthermore, he states that vaccine passports have failed miserably and should be stopped.

"My view on vaccine passports is that they've tried to be implemented around the world in several places. The evidence that has come out in those countries shows they make no difference whatsoever in the spread of a respiratory disease...The evidence is there for everybody to see, and so they should be ditched in any of the countries that have them..." "It shouldn't matter (whether you are vaccinated or not) – it's your own individual choice." See mark 29:05.

When asked about "conspiracy theories," Le Tissier noted that is a convenient label people throw around when they don't want to discuss the facts.

"I think conspiracy theorist is a really easy label to throw at somebody when you don't want to discuss what's going on, when you just want to shut down the debate because it makes you a little bit uncomfortable, because maybe your perception of reality is being challenged, and you don't like that." See mark 34:05.

He spoke about his recent attendance at a protest and noted tens of thousands of people. However the media reported on only a few hundred. And he explained that is another reason he is convinced the major media are nothing more than current mouthpieces for the government. So he believes the answer remains peaceful but widespread protest.

"I think peaceful civil disobedience is the only thing really that we've got up our sleeves – to really push back against the government – and you need big numbers for that – so I would ask everybody who feels something is not quite right to be peacefully, civilly, disobedient because that's our only way out of this." See mark 36:08.

"We only have an illusion of democracy in this country...both the major parties are still controlled by the same people." See mark 38:14.

Matt Le Tissier says he was threatened for speaking out, and later lost his job as a commentator with Sky Sports. However, he has no regrets and feels it is more important to stand up for what is right than to cower to authority.

"And that was more important to me than if I keep the job or not. And if you ask me if I would do the same thing again, knowing the consequences, I definitely would." See mark 32:08.

Le Tissier concludes his interview with Oracle Films by calling upon all celebrities to speak out peacefully – because when influential people speak out, people listen.

Hi, I'm Matt Le Tissier, and I'm calling on all celebrities, people of profile, who know that something's not quite right that haven't said anything – please, don't be afraid, come out and say what you think, because sometimes you need to put your head above the parapet for the greater good.

When celebrities speak out, Big Media often distracts with ad hominem attacks. They use personal insults because they have nothing else. They cannot use science, truth or data to dispute, so they resort to name-calling. Look no further than what they did to discredit Joe Rogan following his recent interviews with Drs. Peter McCullough and Robert Malone.

How about Big Media speaking to the issues for a change, rather than merely trying to smear the source? Do we care more about why our young athletes are suddenly dropping dead or more about which guests Spotify chooses?

What is necessary for us is speaking the truth and demanding that these athletes' deaths be investigated. Perhaps another convoy of truckers can back up the soccer star. Like the Freedom Convey, which coaxed leading provinces to drop their mandates, peaceful protest can result in change, especially within elected and democratic governments. It is essential now, at this crucial moment in history, when the world's freedom is under assault by a non-elected and self-appointed oligarchy, that each of us rises and speaks out as the Freedom Truckers did.
